Kansas and France
Harvesting With a Sickle
Boaz Was Lacking
Unfortunate America

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1927, by Star Co.)

ON EITHER SIDE of the Santa Fe express, in which this is written, the corn fields and farmhouses of Kansas fly past. It is a country unlike that through which the writer drove a few weeks ago in France on the way from Paris to see Clemenceau in his little cottage on the Atlantic at Lejard, not far from Bordeaux.

The trip through France, made in a Lincoln automobile, was as rapid as this trip by train. In France you drive your automobile as fast as you like, but TAKE CARE YOU HURT NOBODY.

French roads are wide and straight; the Lincoln car used by this writer came from Nice to Paris, 900 kilometers, 540 miles, in one day, and did easily the 400 miles from Paris to Lejard between breakfast and dinner.

French drivers go rapidly, but carefully; if they hit anybody the law hits them. A member of the Chamber of Deputies went to jail for a year, all the influence of his friends could not save him He struck a child. B. Forman, of Rochester, N. Y., can tell you of a French chauffeur accused of intoxication, sent to jail for ten years. He killed a child. Mr. Forman saw the thing happen.

Here in Kansas you see great tractors providing power, machinery cutting and binding corn, great engines binding, threshing wheat, and tying grain in sacks, all in one operation.

In France occasionally you would see a peasant and his wife cutting their grain with sickles in small fields of irregular shape. Fields were harvested with scythes, here and there teams of horses drew mowing machines, power-driven agricultural machinery was not seen between Paris and Lejard.

Where mowers had passed you might see old grandmother and her little grandchild bending over, picking up wisps of grain with the right hand, putting them in aprons held by the left hand.

A hundred such gleaners were seen in a day's drive. They were less fortunate than Ruth, their gleanings meagre. There was no Boaz to command his young men, saying, "Let her glean even among the sheaves and reproach her not; and let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her and leave them that she may glean them, but rebuke her not."

With hand rakes the old grandmother and the little girl could have gathered all the gleanings in a short time, but that evidently was not allowed. Gleanings must be done by hand, the old body must stoop, and stoop all day long to pick up stray straws. When the grain had gone from the field an old shepherd would bring his little band of sheep. They would walk through the stubble, eating the over-ripe grain that had fallen from the ears. Other bands of sheep, led by an old man or woman, with dogs to help, ate the grass along the highway edge. No sheep ever strayed on to the road before the automobiles. Dogs prevented that, and the sheep seemed —International Newsreel Telephoto, telegraphed to Boston over wires of A. T. & T. Co.

Where Death Stalked ∾ In St. Louis' Twisted Debris

GRAND AVENUE SHOWING WRECK OF LINDELL TRUST BUILDING AND OVERTURNED AUTOS

LOSS MAY TOTAL $100,000,000

St. Louis, Sept. 30 (A.P.)—St. Louis awoke early today to full realization of the appalling toll of the four minute passage of yesterdays tornado—84 known dead, 671 treated for injuries, 5,000 homes and business structures destroyed or damaged over a devastated area of six square miles and official estimates of the damage running from $10,000,000 to $100,000,000.

With eighteen persons reported missing, many injured in a critical condition and portions of the devastated area still unsearched, it was estimated the total dead might reach 140, the number killed in the city's historic tornado of 1896.

State guardsmen today patrolled the streets under orders to shoot all looters on sight. One thousand Federal troops have been ordered to the city from Jefferson barracks and will assist in guarding the devastated area.

Two reports of looting were made during the night, but were not verified.

LYNN MOTHER OF 5 ENDS LIFE IN POND

Kissing her children good-bye and telling them that she was going for a walk, Mrs. Diana P. Whitten, 43, of Broadway, Lynn, went to the wharf of the Independent Ice Company on the shore of Sluice Pond, Lynn, and plunged to her death in the water today.

Her body was discovered by her husband, Clarence G. Whitten and her two brother, Herbert and George Richardson, after a search of several hours. Medical Examiner Nathaniel P. Breed, after viewing the body and learning that Mrs. Whitten had been despondent since the birth of

TAR BLAST BLINDS 3 CHELSEA FIREMEN

Four Chelsea firemen were hurt, of whom three were blinded and burned with boiling tar from an exploding vat today as fire-fighters of three cities battled with a three-alarm fire amid blazing and exploding resin, oil, naphtha and other chemicals at the plant of the Boston Blacking Company, Carter and Second streets, Chelsea.

Eight explosions endangered the lives of the firemen, but they succeeded in confining the fire to the main plant, saving several storage buildings filled with highly inflammable materials.

The fire was close by the spot where the disastrous Chelsea fire of April, 1908, had its origin.

Besides the three blinded and burned firemen, who were rescued by their comrades and rushed to Chelsea Memorial Hospital, several others were burned, cut or bruised

THIS IS THE WARMEST SEPT. 30 IN FIVE YEARS

The hottest September 30 since 1922—and did you melt?

Climbing to 80 degrees above today at noon from it's high mark of 67 yesterday, made the day seem like one in mid-July and forced the man from Texas to admit that New England has the country cornered in the way of weather variety.

During the fifty years of records in the Weather Bureau there have been only three corresponding dates that have been hotter. They were in 1879, when it was 83; in 1881, when it was 82, and in 1898, when it was 83 and the army bands in Cuba were playing "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

Today's humidity was 54 per cent, which is about normal.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight and Saturday; not much change in temperature; moderate winds, mostly from the southwest.

FIRE MENACES HOSPITAL ON LONG ISLAND

A large barn filled with hay, located but a short distance from the Almshouse Hospital on Long Island, burst into flames from some undertermined cause today. Hospital attaches attempted to fight the fire while aid was called from Boston and Quincy. Plans were made to remove inmates of the hospital to safety.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET STRONG

New York Stock Market was strong in the closing period today. Bulls were aided by the relatively small increase in brokers' loans just reported. U. S. Smelting, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, United Drug and numrous rails showed point or better gains.

Girl Mayoralty Candidate ∾ Absorbs Wisdom From Owl ∾ And Man She Hopes to Supplant

STUDIES "THUNDER OF SILENCE"
The owl of fable never hoots, but simply sits around and listens a whole lot and Miss Helen Gwendolyn Jones, who aspires to be Mayor of Concord, N. H., is getting a few pointers on how to comport herself from the wise old bird.

CAN TALK WHEN NEEDED
Miss Jones, however, doesn't intend to be mum all the time and halted her meditations long enough to show how she will act on the stump, when seeking votes.

BRUSHING UP ON MAYORALTY DUTIES
Mayor Fred M. Marden, candidate for re-election, took a few minutes off at his office to show his rival how the city's business is conducted and, at the right, Miss Jones indicates how she intends to lay down the law after she has won the election. (See Story on Page 3).

DEATH TOLL GROWS AS ST. LOUIS RUINS ARE SEARCHED BY RESCUING PARTIES

Downtown St. Louis escaped virtually unscathed, but some of the city's finest homes along Lindell boulevard, from Newstead avenue to Grand boulevard, were laid waste.

The area of greatest destruction lay roughly southwest to northeast, bounded by Forest Park boulevard, Sarah street, Pendleton avenue and Hebert street.

The black, swirling funnel seemed to have appeared without warning in the vicinity of Forest Park, to have pursued a zig-zag course for six miles, to leap the Mississippi River and dissipate its fury with a last twist at the Illinois tri-cities, Venice, Granite City and Madison, in which six persons were killed and twenty injured.

A citizens' relief committee of 88, with Mayor Victor Miller as chairman, hurriedly was organized to direct relief work. The Red Cross placed a relief station in the center of the stricken area and 100 automobiles were impressed for use as ambulances. Mayor Miller issued an appeal for funds.

DIES IN HOTEL FIRE.

The damage estimate of from $10,000,000 to $100,000,000 came from E. E. Christopher, building commissioner. Insurance men made a flat estimate of $75,000,000 damage.

One man was reported killed in a fire which broke out early today in the ruins of the Roselle Hotel, wrecked by the tornado.

The fire was quickly extinguished, and it was found the man reported killed had died of heart failure when the alarm was sounded. He was one of the guests of the hotel who had gone back to his room, which was not damaged by the tornado.

The tornado was the second in St. Louis' history The first struck 31 years ago and claimed 140 lives in St. Louis and 160 in the vicinity.

The two tornadoes followed generally the same course. The estimated area of twister of 1896 was eight miles in length and from one-quarter to a mile and a quarter wide.

Throughout the wilderness of crumpled houses, fallen trees, wrecked factories and business buildings and twisted wires men dug frantically in the darkness.

LIKE A SHELLED CITY.

Shortly before 4 o'clock this morning explorers seeking the bodies of the five missing children in the recently remodelled Central High school found the bodies of two little girls.

Seven school buildings, housing 6,500 children, were in the tornado swept area, but only at Central High was there a report of a fatality. Eighteen other pupils in that school were injured when a huge tower was sent crashing down on the auditorium.

Old brick houses were crmpled like eggshells in one part of the area. The newer homes were not spared and gaping holes where the wind wrenched off a wing or lifted the roof gave the district the appearance of a shell-torn city.

Rescue workers rushing into the zone found pathetic sights of men, women and children standing about dazed and helpless, while others dug into the heaps of brick and wood for loved ones.

For an hour before the twister struck, the air was heavy and portentous with storm. The continuous low rumbling of thunder was punctuated with lightning. The oppressiveness was dispelled by a rising wind and suddenly the telltale black clouds appeared in the sky.

SHEETS OF FLAME.

In a twinkling the crashing of glass and the singing of the wind in the trees announced the coming of the tornado. Chimneys crashed houses heaved and fell, while the air was dark with dust and flying missiles. Witnesses telling their stories later spoke of sheets of flame, their origin a mystery, that swept past and dissipated themselves by striking a building or a tree.

Automobiles moved crazily about, overturning and wrecking themselves like playthings of children. Everywhere the thud of falling walls and chimneys, and the tearing sound of piazzas being wrenched from their foundations, filled the air.

Swift in its coming, the tornado was as quick in leaving. From the ruined homes and stores the frightened, wet occupants appeared in a stream. They found a wilderness of fallen trees to block their way. Hysterical women supported by men picked their way out of the debris.

As the danger from fallen wires became great, self appointed guards stationed themselves until police arrived to take charge.

A cordon was hastily placed about the section while elementary relief work was begun within. As the news was flashed to the downtown section, the police and fire departments hastily mobilized and soon the sirens of fire apparatus and police ambulances announced the coming of outside help.

The first movement was toward Central High School, Firemen found sixteen injured pupils who were immediately removed as the roof threatened to fall. Then the search for dead was begun in all parts of the area.

Fire broke out in several places and was extinguished by firemen with the help of a steady drizzle of rain which followed the tornado.

The bodies of three women were soon taken from burning debris, two of them charred and unrecognizable.

In an attempt to flee from the storm Mrs. Agnes Straumann and Mrs. Elsie Voelker ran directly into the path of death and lost their lives.

They were riding in their automobile on West Bell avenue. They saw the storm approaching and abandoning their machine sought refuge in a house. Hardly had they crossed the threshold when the house collapsed, killing them both.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Five persons were known to be dead today in three Illinois towns, Granite City, Venice and Madison struck by the tornado traveling northeast across the Mississippi river.

MOTHER VANISHED, FATHER SHOT
Maria Leone, three years old, and her brother, Joseph, six, are at the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Lombardi, No. 67 Frankfort street, East Boston, while their father, Tony Leone, lies in a New York hospital, shot down by a policeman after slashing Tony Julius, whom he accused of eloping with Mrs. Leone.

Survivors Tell of Sweep of Death

St. Louis, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—From a point of vantage in a street car, a newspaperman witnessed the antics of yesterday's tornado and told of it as follows:

"As I boarded the car I noticed that the hugh black cloud over Forest Park had been vomiting rain. The lightning was being succeeded by a yellowish green color, and there was a sharp line of demarcation between the blackness and the apparent coming of brighter skies.

"Four women sitting in a group in the car were chatting carelessly. Two men boarded the car and nothing seemed amiss but the rain.

"Suddenly the car staggered under the impact of the wind from behind. The front lifted from the rails, but was set back on them again with scarcely a jar. It rocked from side to side on its springs.

DESTRUCTION IS QUICK.

"A tree fell just in front of it as the motorman stopped. Two automobiles standing at the curb began backing away alarmingly; one of them turned neatly across the north curb of the street to come to rest in a front yard. The other traveled half a block and stopped. A big truck crashed into the rear end of the street car.

"The swaying of the car now began to have its effect upon the passengers. I was busy looking around when a wail from the eldest and fattest of the women indicated that she feared the end was coming. We rushed to reassure the women and soon the wind quieted down.

"The whole thing was over in less than a minute. One blast from the powerful bellows the wind god was working was enough to effect all the destruction he had in mind.

"Tumbling forth into the downpour of rain, I headed down Laclede avenue, struggling through debris of trees, wires from telephone poles, slates and tiles, amid a general desolation. I could not believe that such destruction could be accomplished in so short a time.

DINNER STILL COOKING.

"Houses in many places had their walls completely blown from the stories. At one house lacking walls a dinner in a back room was still cooking. At another a man sat on a bed, from around which all walls had been swept, his hands holding his head, baffled look about him as though he did not realize what had happened."

William H. Buren, a railway postal clerk, was in his room on Lindell boulevard when the tornado came.

"First came a dash of rain that looked white like snow. Then came the furious blast of wind. I saw things flying through the air outside and backed myself up againts the east wall of the room. The west wall of the house next door was blown down and a brick hurtled through my window, but missed me.

PIANO BLOWN OVER.

"The west wall of our house was blown down. A girl rooming above me had a piano which was turned upside down, but she was unhurt. Last April I missed the Poplar Bluff tornado by just four minutes, but I sure didn't miss this one."

Miss Ariel Cargo, superintendent of the Shriners' Crippled Children's Hospital on King's Highway, said:

"I saw a funnel-shaped cloud coming over Forest Park and knew that it was going to hit is. The roof was torn off the boys' ward on the north wing of the building, but none of the children was injured. The larger ones were frightened when they realized the severity of the storm, but the younger ones were very quiet. All the children were very well-behaved during the storm."

Many Public Buildings Are Razed by Tornado

St. Louis, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Many of St. Louis' public buildings, including seven schools and four hospitals, suffered damage in yesterday's tornado, which also destroyed numerous fine residences. A total of 5,000 structures were razed in the four-minute burst of fury.

The Columbia School was seriously damaged. Central High, recently repaired, suffered badly, and St. Louis University High at the edge of Forest Park was unroofed and otherwise damaged.

The City Sanitarium, the Shriners' Hospital, the Mullanphy Hospital and the Washington University Medical School also felt the wrath of the elements.

The roof of the Perfection Manufacturing Company was blown away and a block of homes occupied by negroes was wrecked. Riddick School was damaged and a number of students injured.

At Whittier and Easton avenue the entire front wall of the Pumphrey Drug Company was blown out. The Musical Arts Building at Boyle and Olive streets suffered badly. Church's Novelty Shoe Company, Leffingwell and Betton streets, where 1,000 persons were employed until a month ago, was levelled.

Church properties suffered but little. A few tiles were missing from the dome of the new cathedral on Lindell boulevard. Across the street Rosati-Kain High School for Girls escaped with only a few broken windows.

The Rick Educational Museum collapsed and it was feared that almost priceless specimens of natural life and other exhibits had been destroyed.

A block of three-story apartment houses at Maryland and Whittier streets was destroyed.

The Roselle Hotel, Sarah, McPherson garage, Polar Wave ice plant, and Nugent's uptown branch dry goods store also were seriously damaged.

1,000 FEDERAL TROOPS SENT TO ST. LOUIS

Washington, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—The War Department today formally issued orders placing the 1,000 troops in Jefferson Barracks at the disposal of St. Louis in patrolling the streets of the storm area. General William Lassiter will be in command.

Lightning Kills Two as Storm Hits Missouri Towns

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Two men were killed by lightning and at least a score were injured, several seriously, by an electrical storm followed by a tornado in the rural sections about eight miles east and south of Poplar Bluff.

The dead are: James Frizzell, thirty, farmer, and Thomas Dunning, forty-four, of near Corning.

The tornado struck the little town of Brosley, wrecking several buildings and injuring seven persons. The storm struck Doniphan, causing some damage to property, but no casualties were reported. Corning, Ark., thirty-eight miles south, also was struck.

Mammoth Springs, Ark., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Noat Langston, seven, was killed and his father, A. B. Langston, was severely injured in a tornado which struck the Langston farmhouse in the town of French, Ark. Three other members of the family were less seriously hurt.

'TOMBOY' NOW AIMS TO RULE CONCORD, N. H.

By FRANCES L. BAIRD

Concord, N. H., Sept. 30.—Helen Gwendolyn Jones, 24-year-old college graduate, who has filed as a candidate for Mayor admits that she was somewhat of a tomboy when she was growing up, or at least that the neighbors called her one.

Seated in the Mayor's chair at City Hall, "just to see how it feels," she added: "The neighbors all said I never would amount to anything because I was different from most girls of my age.

"But I have been told so many times that I will make my mark in the world since I went to college that I think it is about time to start making it."

She added that she didn't smoke, though she doesn't condemn girls who do.

Miss Jones occupied the Mayor's chair for a short time, "Just to see how it feels," while she was photographed after a laughing exchange of courtesies with the present incumbent, Mayor Fred N. Marden.

"It's a sandy beach and the water's fine; come on in, Gwen," invited the genial mayor, waving his rival candidate to his chair in his private office at City Hall.

"Yes, but the sands may be shifting, Mr. Mayor," demurely countered his fair opponent. "You are a good sport, and you may be sure that the fight will be fair."

"Say everything nice you want to about that girl," whispered the mayor to reporters. "She's dead game, that one!"

"I've always wanted to get into

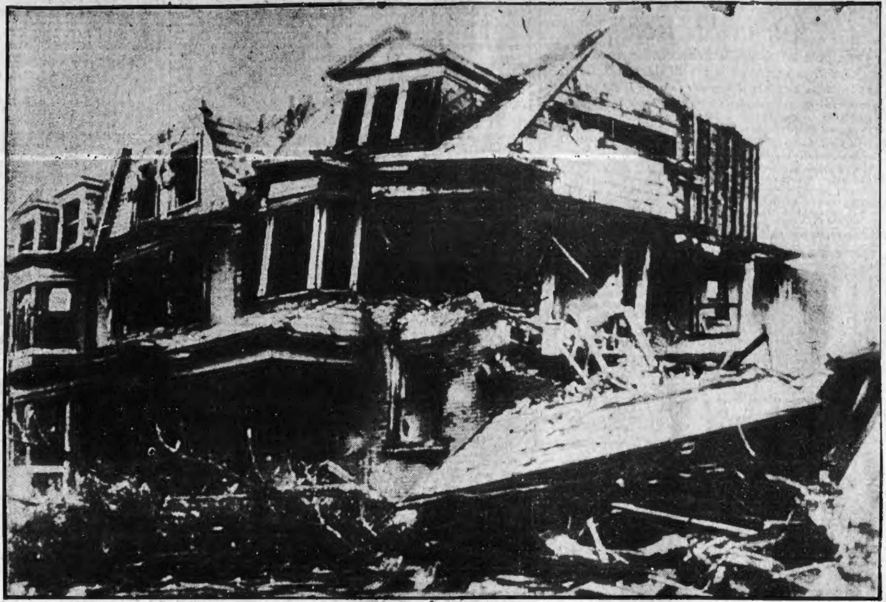
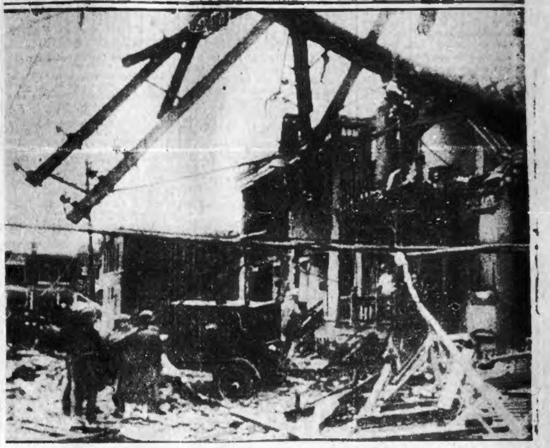
WHERE DEATH RODE ST. LOUIS' TERRIFIC TWISTER

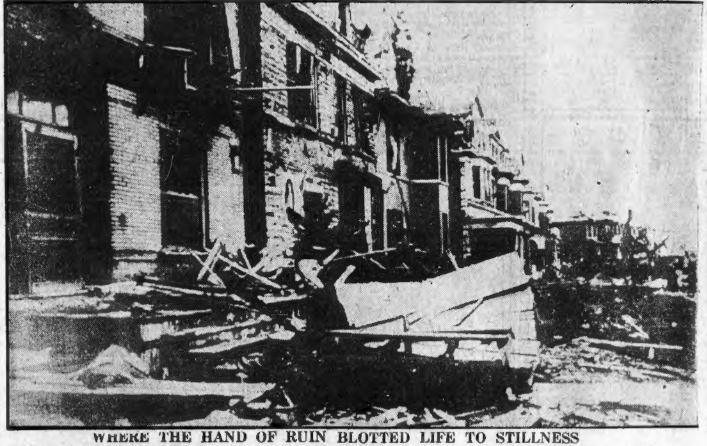


THREE WOMEN, CAUGHT UNAWARES, WERE CRUSHED TO DEATH BY DEBRIS HERE
Ruins of the house at No. 4,201 Maryland avenue, St. Louis, where the mangled bodies of three women were found today, as searchers combed the debris after one of the most destructive tornadoes in the history of the country. The death toll may reach 100 or more; hundreds were injured; property damage may exceed $100,000,000. The city today looks as it might were it to withstand a bombardment from "big Berthas." (All photos by International Newsreel transmitted to Boston Evening American over telephoto wires of the A. T. & T. Co.)

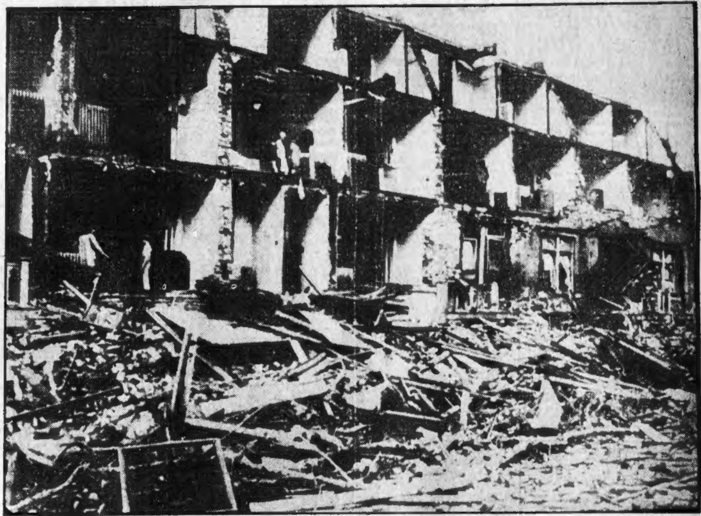


SCENE IN "A CARNAGE OF THE WINDS"
This photo provides a graphic illustration of the remarkably destructive forces of the tornado which swooped down without warning upon St. Louis and laid vast areas of its magnificent homes, parks and public buildings in ruins. Houses in some instances were sliced in twain as if by a monstrous knife.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN
A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK
BOSTON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1927
GENERAL NEWS SECTION



WHERE THE HAND OF RUIN BLOTTED LIFE TO STILLNESS
This photo shows a section of Maryland avenue, St. Louis, after the tornado had swept crushing along, a mighty engine of terrifying destruction, leaving in its wake mountains of debris, horror-stricken people, lifeless forms, ever-widening pools of blood making grotesque diagrams on a littered pavement, where a moment before all had been peace and contentment and hope.



TIER ON TIER RISE ROOMS THAT IN A TRICE BECAME TOMBS
This is the remains of an apartment house at No. 4200 Maryland avenue. Note how the rooms stand tier on tier, gaunt spectres of havoc. No living thing could pass through this destruction unscathed, either physically or mentally, torn and distracted by the harrowing tragedy of it all. Hundreds of homes, scores of hotels and apartment houses were treated likewise in the twister.

BRIDEGROOM, 18 KILLS SELF AT GIRL'S HOME

Beneath the bedroom window of his girl wife, from whom he was estranged, Ballard Webster Holt, eighteen-year-old bridegroom, sent a bullet crashing into his brain today and died there, on the lawn of her parents' home in Maplewood street, Malden.

His bride, Evelyn, nineteen years old, heard his dying moans but had not heard the shot. Thinking the noise was made by a cat, she fell asleep, ignorant of the tragedy until her mother discovered the boy's body two hours later.

Beside the body police found a 32-calibre revolver. Under direction of Medical Examiner Thomas B. Durrell, the body was removed to an undertaker's.

The girl whom young Holt led to the altar only last January could throw little light on the mystery underlying the shooting, except to explain, amid her tears, that the boy seemed to worry about his work and family affairs almost from the start of their married life.

"He left me twice, the last time on Labor Day, and he would give no explanation," she said. "Unhappiness crept into our married life only a little while after our wedding."

QUINCY GIRL MUST SHUT HER TEA ROOM

After a legal battle waged between members of the Merrymount Improvement Association, Inc., of Quincy and Mrs. Clara Edwardes, proprietress of a tea room, Judge Sisk in Suffolk Superior Court granted a permanent injunction against the latter restraining her from using her property for that purpose.

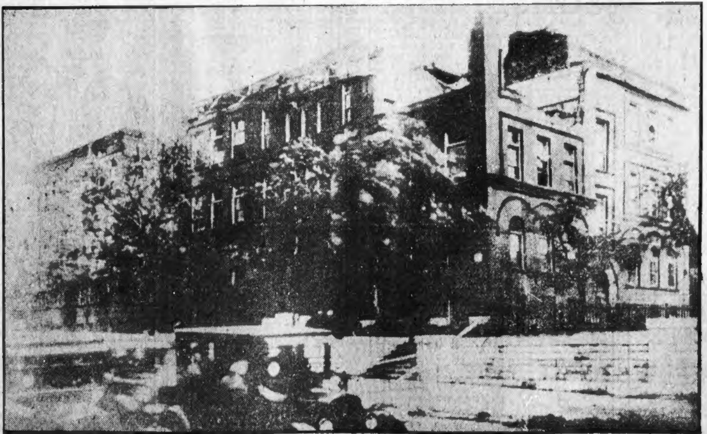
According to officials of the association, Mrs. Edwardes, at the time she acquired the property and began building operations, was warned that there were restrictions against tea rooms and similar establishments in the district. When the tea room was opened the injunction was asked for.

40 GIRLS FLEE FIRE IN EAST CAMBRIDGE FACTORY

Forty girls fled to the street today when fire started in the five-story brick building of H. M. Sawyer & Sons, dealers in oiled clothing, at Second and Hurley streets, East Cambridge. The damage was slight.

Kale Trial Next Month

Lawrence, Sept. 30.—The trial of George Elmer Harrison Taylor, dancing barber of Salisbury Beach, for the murder of Stella Kale on June 5, was assigned today to the Salem sitting of the Essex County Superior Criminal Court on October 18.



WHERE 600 CHILDREN ESCAPED DEATH BY THE GRACE OF GOD
The Marquette School, where, at the height of the tornado, which swept by with a fiendish fury which beggars description, 600 little children crouched in fear for their lives. Through some freak of the storm, some kindly work of Providence, they all escaped alive. However, many of them were to learn that their parents and other relatives had been less fortunate.

SOS CALL AT HAVERHILL TO SAVE BABIES

An S. O. S. call was sent out today by health authorities of Haverhill, where the lives of countless children are at stake in the infantile paralysis epidemic.

Serum is needed to avert death or deformity. Only men, women and children who have previously had the dread disease and have been cured can supply this necessity—and furthermore only by giving their blood.

The appeal for such volunteers was made after Dr. Elliott F. Luther of the Harvard Infantile Paralysis Commission asserted that unless they came forward the battle against the epidemic would have to be abandoned.

"There are two new cases, one an adult, and the supply of serum is all but exhausted!" That was the warning that accompanied the call for help.

The needed serum can be obtained in Haverhill only from 150 survivors of epidemics in the last 17 years. Many are still under twenty-one years old. All over the age of ten are urged to volunteer.

In Revere, because of the prevalence of the disease, Dr. Francis Licata, chairman of the board of health, closed the weekly baby clinics.

The National Public Health Service at Washington today reported 641 new cases in 42 States for the week ended September 24, as compared with 656 cases in the previous week.

MUSTN'T ANNOY EX-WIFE, COURT WARNS MAN

Because his divorced—and since remarried—wife alleged that he threatened her and tried to force his way into her home when she was alone, Thomas J. Raleigh of the Back Bay was rebuked and warned today in Suffolk Probate Court by Judge Joseph R. McCoole.

The action was on petition of Mrs. Muriel E. Raleigh Horne for modification of the decree giving her custody of her son, Charles Thomas Raleigh, with certain rights to the father. These rights, including visits to his son at periods, Mrs. Horne seeks to have revoked.

Her sister-in-law was in the house with her at that time, Mrs. Horne said, but on previous occasions, when she was alone and her ex-husband called, he threatened her, and when she tried to close the door against his threats he attempted to force it open and attack her.

Judge McCoole said to Raleigh, in taking the petition under advisement:

"If you are going to see your child, you should not go that way. You must bear in mind, despite your eagerness to see your own child, that if visits of this kind are reported, it will become necessary some day to have the right taken away from you permanently. I am warning you, but, however, I am not going to hold anything against you one way or another."

a baby four months ago, said that she had committed suicide.

She left nothing in the way of a note explaining her act.

It was about 6 o'clock when Mrs. Whitten left the house and when she did not return an hour later, the children appealed to their father. He communicated with Mrs. Whitten's brothers, and with them traced her to Sluice Pond.

A resident in the vicinity, who had seen her standing on the wharf, thought she was merely looking into the water. The body was found a short distance from the wharf.

Mrs. Whitten was prominent in the Daughters of Pocahontas and the Rebekahs. Besides her husband and brothers, she is survived by five children whose ages range from four months to 11 years.

Washington, Sept. 30 (A. P.).—Elbert F. Baldwin, European editor of The Outlook, is dead in Geneva, according to information received today.

4 FIREMEN HURT AT BLAZE

but only one of these required hospital treatment.

Although suffering intense agony the three who were covered with hot tar will recover, according to hospital authorities.

The injured:

Captain John T. Lehan, Engine 1.
Hoseman Walter Miller, Engine 1.
Hoseman James R. Rourke, Engine 1.
Hoseman James Morrison.

The first three were in the interior of the plant, fighting the blaze, when the vat exploded with a terrific roar, scattering boiling oil in all directions.

Blinded and crazed with pain the trio dropped to the charred floor, rolling about in agony. Other members of Engine 1 heroically sprang to the rescue and half dragged, half carried the three out into the open.

The rescue was effected despite the fact that several of the rescuers also had been struck on the face and hands with the hot tar, and the pain of the burns made them grit their teeth.

THREE SUFFER AGONY.

During the course of the fire, which attracted a large crowd, there were eight separate explosions that aroused hundreds of residents of Chelsea who flocked to the scene. The entire district was menaced for more than two hours.

The Boston Blacking Company plant consists of one story wings and a three story center. The plant was filled with chemicals which caused the explosions. Patrolman Richard Ahearn, attracted by the first explosion which blew out every window in the place, sent in the first alarm.

As soon as Chief Hudson of the Chelsea department arrived he sent, in quick succession, a second and third alarm, calling out the Everett and Revere departments.

The flames had got such a start that the firemen turned their attention to saving surrounding property, menaced by the blaze. The firemen were hampered by the explosions, which succeeded one another at frequent intervals.

CHIEF BOWLED OVER.

It is believed the fire was started from an overheated vat of wax.

During the height of the blaze a hose coupling broke and a heavy stream of water caught Chief Hudson in the stomach, bowling him over and thoroughly soaking him. The chief was incapacitated for several minutes but eventually returned to the fight.

Owners of surrounding property were notified by the police of the danger. Three buildings directly across Carter street were especially menaced and for a time firemen kept their outer walls soaked. A number of owners motored to the scene, ready to move out their books and valuables in case other buildings caught.

The burning chemicals caused a thick, black smoke which, curling up above the huge darting red tongues of fire, hung like a heavy pall over the entire section of Chelsea.

Damage to the building was esti-

her activities in building up its social and moral life, the news of her death will come as a shock to many thousands. In addition to her many organization interests, far more than the ordinary woman carries forward, she was a talented and forceful speaker, and made a name for herself in campaign addresses throughout Massachusetts.

Born in Boston, Mrs. O'Leary graduated from the Sacred Heart and Notre Dame Academies. She was married six years ago. Among the organizations in which she was a leader were the Cecilian Guild, the Guild of the Infant Savior, the Philomathea Club, the Proparvulis Club, the League of Catholic Women, the Catholic Daughters of America, and Jamaica Plain Court, M. C. O. F.

Mrs. O'Leary is survived by her husband, and by her mother, Mrs. Harriett S. Hayes.

GIRL DESCRIBES 'PHANTOM' WHO STABBED 24

Bridgeport, Ct., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—"The phantom stabber," for two and a half years the terror of girls and young women here, has brought the total number of his victims to 24 and still eludes the police.

His latest attack came early last night when Ruth Stillings, 14-year-old high school tennis star, on her way home with a friend from the Beardsley Park courts, was stabbed in the right breast.

Miss Stillings describes her assailant as a dark-complexioned young man, about 5 feet 8 inches in height, wearing dark gray trousers, a gray cap and a blue sweater with dark stripes. He appeared to be about 21 years old, and Miss Stillings was certain that she would be able to recognize the man if she ever saw him again.

GIRL CANDIDATE HAS CONCORD GUESSING

politics and decided that the best way to enter was with a bang," she said in explanation of her dash into the local political field. "The time has never been right before to do anything.

"But now I feel that it is time that Concord had a woman mayor, who sees her problems from a feminine viewpoint and I feel capable of administering the city's affairs at least as well as some men mayors that have occuped the chair. We have had good, bad and indifferent men mayors. Why not give a woman a chance now."

A SILENTLY ACTIVE CAMPAIGN.

Miss Jones will carry on a "silently active campaign," she announced, with positively no political mud slinging. And down at Cty Hall they are wondering what "silently active means when spoken by this particular young woman for the veteran politicians recognize in her a clever girl with "ideas" and no one knows just what ideas she may spring in this campaign. In short, Gwen has them all guessing. And that amuses her for that is exactly her policy in dealing with most situations, she declared.

"When I was president of the women's student government association at the university for three years, a girl never knew just exactly what I knew when I called her on the street, but I usually had an open and shut case before I ever called her," said Miss Jones. "That is what I shall do in this campagin."

She has already started campaign organization with her brother, Joseph, 21, as her manager.

Gwen was graduated last June from the University of New Hampshire at Durham, where she majored in political science and government. Her minor course during the four years was economics, closely allied to the subject which has always been first in her interests, city government.

She was a star debater of the college, helping to form the first woman's debating team that Durham ever had and took part in debates which defeated Radcliffe, Middlebury College and Maine.

For one day Miss Jones acted as Mayoress of Durham last Winter with a classmate, Lawrence Jensen of Ashburnham, Mass., acting as the Mayor. It was great fun but it set her to thinking more seriously of being Mayor of Concord every day next year.

A GOOD DEBATER.

"The neighbors said I was a tomboy when I was growing up and that I never would amount to anything because I was different from most girls my age. But I have been told so many times that I will make my mark in the world since I went to college that I think it is about time to start making it," she laughed. "I don't object to other girls smoking, but Io do not care to smoke myself and I am opposed to dieting for reducing. I intend to enjoy my meals as I always have, no matter how much I weigh."

HE HAD $2,500, AND THEN THEY SAW HIM

Chicopee, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Antoni Desrochers is out $2,500, he told the police today, through his desire to make what appeared like a nice profit in the turnover of "merchandise" offered by two strangers, the nature of which he said he did not know.

Investigation of the contents of suitcases after the deal was completed revealed envelopes containing flour. Desrochers said he was induced to make the blind purchase on the promise of a third man to take the goods off his hands at an advance in price.

ACCUSED OF FORGING CHUM'S NAME ON ORDER

The alleged forgery of the name of his fellow-lodger on a postal money order resulted today in the arrest and arraignment of Arthur Cote, 20, Lynn, before U. S. Commissioner E. C. Jenney in Federal court. He was arrested at the main postoffice in possession of a money order made payable to Albert Bowen, with whom Cote lives on Andrews street, Lynn.

Cote pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,000 for the grand jury.

CITY OF FALL RIVER OWNS TEXTILE PLANT

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 30 (A.P.)—The Granite Mills have been taken over by the city of Fall River as a result of unpaid taxes after an attempted auction sale, at which there were no bidders. Under the law, the city would have to retain the property two years before seeking a clear title through the land court.

Refusal to pay the taxes was based on the textile plant's claims for abatement due to insolvency, which the city refused to recognize. Legal action by the mill is expected.

COOLIDGE SEES TROOPS ACT WORLD WAR BATTLE

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.)—Leading officials of the government, headed by President Coolidge, and a notable array of army officers, together with many prominent Washington society folk, were on hand today to witness a spectacular reproduction of an important battle of the American troops in the World War as the feature event of the military circus and exposition staged for the benefit of the Army Relief Society.

Besides President and Mrs. Coolidge, a notable coterie of government and army officials were invited to attend the affair as patrons, including Vice-President and Mrs. Dawes, Secretary of War Davis, General Pershing and more than 30 major-generals and their wives.

As an unique episode of the exposition, a number of wives of generals and other high ranking officers, attired in aprons and other kitchen costume, were assigned to "mess" kitchens to serve the guests

REFUSES TO ORDER ARREST IN FIRE TRUCK KILLING

Finding no indications of negligence, Judge Devlin in municipal court today refused to issue a warrant for the arrest of Frederick Seitz, driver of ladder 17, Harrison avenue.

On September 27 the fire truck driven by Seitz killed David Lukasian of Whitfield street, Dorchester, in Essex street.

'Diamond' Jim Brady's Life to be Filmed

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—"Diamond" Jim Brady, one of the most picturesque figures in Broadway life in the days when Rector's, Churchill's, and Shanley's were in their prime, is to have his life incorporated into a motion picture drama.

In writing the story of the man who wore diamonds for shoe buttons, waistcoat buttons, in sleeves and as studs, Tom Geraghty, the author, has brought in a great deal of the New York that no longer exists. The lavish tales of "Diamond" Jim Brady are still told. His appearance at every first night and his manner of entertaining the famous actresses who were the toasts of the town is a tangible part of Broadway's history.

Emil Jannings

Emil Jannings, for whom the scenario was especially written, will have an opportunity to portray one of the most colorful characters New York has ever seen. No more interesting story has ever been related than the operation performed upon "Diamond" Jim for a new stomach. The epicure's stomach, after years of being called upon to do double work, finally rebelled. A remarkable operation gave Broadway's pal a new stomach, and for this gift Johns Hopkins Hospital received a bequest of half a million dollars.

I learned about the filming of "Diamond Jim Brady," with Emil Jannings in the title role, in a roundabout way. Authors, actors and walls will talk, and although no official announcement has been made, there is little doubt that this will be Jannings' part in the near future.

WHEN Winfield Sheehan returns from New York Monday he will find Al Green, one of his directors, waiting for him. Al has no complaint to register, just a modest request, that's all. It seems that he wants to make "The Dollar Princess." Nothing else will do.

"The Dollar Princess" was a successful musical comedy on Broadway eight years ago. The music is by Leo Falls. I don't grow nervous any more when anyone suggests a musical comedy for a motion picture. Once or twice this type of stage play has done right by its creator and turned into a most acceptable motion picture.

THE very thought of the contrast between Greta Garbo and Polly Moran is worth a laugh. Polly, who plays the Irish characters who fight, laugh and love their way through the films, will change her nationality in "The Divine Woman," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer special, and play a French laundress.

She will be in good company, for in addition to the speely-eyed Greta, there will be Lars Hansen and Lowell Sherman. A pretty good cast, eh, what?

SURE, there is nothing an Irishman won't try once. Tom Walsh, the father of Raoul and George Walsh, was watching his son directing Gloria Swanson in "Sadie Thompson."

"Come on, Dad," said Raoul, half in fun, "we need someone to play the Governor of Paga-Pago." "All right," said Mr. Walsh, Senior, walking on the set. And those who saw him say he gave an excellent performance.

DO you remember Sir Francis Beekman, who bought his own wife's diamond tiara for Lorelei in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"? He is one of the principal comedy characters in Anita Loos' story. Mack Swain, who first came into screen fame in Charlie Chaplin pictures, will play this character.

Alice White, it seems, won the job of Dorothy a few weeks ago. I am sorry to be behind the times, but this happened while I was prize fighting in Chicago.

Mary Brian

ZANE GREY gets all of them. Now, just a minute, please. I mean his thrillers capture our best stars at one time or another. Here we have little Mary Brian playing a cowgirl in "Under the Tonto Rim." Well, these Westerns are good training schools and the exhibitors' delight—and someone has to play in them.

SAM TAYLOR has gone to Del Monte for a vacation. Sam, it seems, is not to direct Mary Pickford after all. He is still heartwhole and fancy-free, so he says, and ready for a job—providing it is the right one.

* * *

ALL things point to Carmelita Geraghty succeeding Madeline Hurlock as the vamp in the Sennett comedies. Carmelita, who is the daughter of Tom, even if he doesn't look his age, has made four comedies for the Sennett factory. She has just been cast for another Sennett comedy, and since Miss Hurlock has resigned from that company—well, it looks to me as if Carmelita has her future as a comedienne cut out for her.

WILL OPPOSE "RIDERS" ON FLOOD LEGISLATION

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.)—Senators and Representatives from the flood states will strenuously resist any efforts to attach to Mississippi flood control legislation any other national projects, such as Boulder Canyon dam and Muscle Shoals.

Assured that a comprehensive plan of the Mississippi flood control will be ready in December, they will seek the right of way for it in the new Congress with a view to the earliest possible action by the House and Senate. And they want this legislation to stand on its own merits without being delayed by consideration of "riders."

BRITAIN PUSHES PLAN FOR INTER-EMPIRE AIRSHIPS

London, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Steady progress is being made in the plan initiated some months ago for an inter-empire airship service. The latest development is a tour of the dominions by an imperial airship mission in connection with provisions for the establishment of the needed mooring masts.

Announcement that the South African government has concluded an agreement with the Imperial Airways, Inc., for the erection of a mooring mast at Tongaat is an outcome of the mission's visit there. The members of the mission now are in Australia for a similar purpose.

Auto Slogan to Tell World About Hub Is Coyne Plan

As a publicity stunt to boom Boston, Representative Francis X. Coyne of Dorchester today proposed in a letter to Mayor Nichols that the city provide automobilists with metal signs bearing an appropriate slogan.

"I believe this could be done at very low cost and would give constructive publicity to our city," said Coyne. "I feel confident every public spirited citizen would be glad to place one of these signs on his car.

"You realize as well as I that Boston, with its wonderful historic value, properly advertised, would attract thousands more of tourists from all over the country."

HOLDUP DEATH CASE RESTS

Lawrence, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—The fate of Leo Nolin of South Groveland and Herman A. Reed of Waterbury, Conn., charged with the murder of William H. Griffin, Haverhill storekeeper on March 7 last will be placed in the hands of a jury in Superior criminal court here probably next Monday afternoon.

Both sides rested today until Monday when argument will be made by the prosecution and defense counsel and Judge Joseph F. Quinn will make his charge to the jury. Counsel had an hour's conference with the court prior to adjournment.

As Judge Quinn excused the jury until Monday, Reed rose in the prisoner's cage and disturbed proceedings with these remarks: "I said something wrong yesterday. I would like to change what I said."

His counsel quieted him and he resumed his seat in the pen. The case of Mary Cwickla, 18-year-old Suffield, Conn., girl charged with being an accessory after the fact to robbery and murder, will reach the jury at the same time.

8 ICEHOUSES BURNED AND FIREBUG IS HUNTED

Fall River, Sept. 30.—Eight ice houses, the property of Aurelieus Lagasse of this city, and located on Reed road, Dartmouth, were destroyed by fire believed to have been of incendiary origin today. The loss was estimated at $40,000 to $50,000.

Neighbors said that an automobile without lights had been near one of the ice houses about 1 a.m., the fire being discovered shortly after its departure. Several houses were threatened by the flames, but were saved by firemen. An investigation is being made.

FIFTH DUVALL OFFICIAL INDICTED IN PROBE

Indianapolis, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Indictment of Virgil Vandergritt, president of the Indianapolis Board of Public Works, was returned today on a charge of violation of the State Securities Law through sale of stock in an electric oil well rejuvenator company.

Vandergrift is the fifth official of the administration of Mayor John L. Duvall to face charges, filed either by the jury or by prosecuting attorneys.

FRESH AIR AUTOIST ARRESTED IN CRASH

An early morning ride for fresh air ended in disaster for Albert P. Curdo of Rutland square, South End, today, when he drove his automobile against a post on the safety island in Park square. The machine was overturned and badly damaged, and Curdo was arrested by Officer William Shea of Division 4 for operating under the influence of liquor and so as to endanger the public.

C. P. MARBLE, EDITOR, DEAD

Charles P. Marble, managing editor and vice-president of the Modern Priscilla, a woman's publication, died today at the Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, following a long illness.

Mr. Marble was born in Methuen in 1875. For several years he lived at No. 42 Mt. Vernon street, later moving to Marblehead. He was also secretary of the Southgate Press, a former president of the Advertising Club of Boston, first president of the Better Business Bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and a past grand master of John Hancock Lodge of Masons of Methuen. He is survived by his widow, his mother, and a sister.

The funeral will be at Mount Auburn Chapel at 3 p. m., Sunday.

Dolls Have Hot Time When Sun Starts Toy Shop Blaze

"Gee, but it's geting hot," said the little celluloid doll policeman to the little blonde ballet dancer in the window of the New England Doll and Novelty Company at No. 107 Washington street, today. "It's just terrible," she replied, "and I do hope someone will draw down the curtain, the sun is so strong."

"You've got nothing on me," chimed in the rubber bathing doll. Just then there was a curl of smoke in celluloid row, bald-headed-row at that, and then a flash of flame.

Real dolls inside the store saw the smoke and real firemen came to the rescue of the little toy firemen.

It was all over in a few minutes and the damage was slight. The sun's rays beating through the window had started the excitement by igniting the celluloid.

ROOSEVELT FOR BAN ON SMITH

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, keynote speaker of the Republican State convention, in session here today, warned that if Governor Alfred E. Smith is to be kept out of the White House a larger number of Republican members of the Legislature must be elected this Fall.

"For the first time in history the shadow of Tammany Hall lies athwart the White House," Roosevelt declared.

"It is in our power to dispell that shadow by electing a strong Republican majority to the Legislature, and serve notice that New York will be found in the Republican column in the presidential election next year.

Roosevelt said that if Republicans fail to elect a larger majority of the next Legislature the country will say:

"New York is Tammany tied. She wishes to see in the White House Governor Smith, with the shadow of Fourteenth street resting across him."

An attack on Governor Smith's administration of State finances, his water power policy and his plan of financing State projects through bond issues was the chief feature of the platform presented to the convention.

CLASSIFIED AD BEGAN CAREER OF MODEL

How one of Boston's most famous child models, Frances (Foo) MacDonald, subject of internationally known artists and sculptors, owes her career and present income of more than $10,000 a year to a little classified ad inserted in the Boston Evening American, four years ago, is told by her mother, Mrs. W. H. MacDonald, of No. 93 Warren street, Roxbury, in a letter just received by this newspaper.

"Four years ago when Frances was but ten years old," writes Mrs. MacDonald, "I answered a classified advertisement in the American for a child model, enclosing some pictures of my little girl.

"The advertiser turned out to be the head of a well known Boston school of design, who sent for Frances at once and arranged for her first posing. Since that time she has been in such demand that I have had to engage a private tutor so that she can complete her education.

"My ambition is to have Frances take up a stage career as soon as she is old enough. Her present income of more than $10,000 a year has made it possible for her to learn dancing and study music under the very best teachers in Boston. She is not yet 15 years of age."

Frances MacDonald has posed for such well known Boston painters as Arthur Spear, William Paxton, Jean Nutting Oliver and Margaret Fitzhugh Brown, who painted the portrait of King Alphonso of Spain, and for Charles Hawthorn of New York.

Among Boston sculptors who have used her as a model are Phillip Sears, George Demetrios, Nellie Thompson and Earnest Pelegrini who found her features ideal for his Christ Child.

BOSTON MAN GOVERNS UNITED FRUIT TRAFFIC

Claude D. Doswell of Boston, recently elected a vice-president of the United Fruit Company, has been assigned by President Victor M. Cutter to have charge of traffic, including both passenger and freight service. Mr. Doswell has been in the service of the United Fruit Company since 1906. With the exception of the last two years he served in the tropical divisions, where he had much to with transportation problems of the company.

ASK CIVILIAN PAY FOR ARMY

Los Angeles, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—A resolution introduced before three departments of the American Federation of Labor, all branches of which are gathering for the opening Monday of its national convention, proposed in part that officers and men employed in all branches of military service be awarded remuneration proportion to that received by civilians.

The resolution, which was introduced yesterday at meetings of the metal trades, building trades and union labels departments, also proposed that the government declare all naval bases and arsenals permanent and keep them in good repair. Officers of the metal trades branch declared the resolution certain to be reported upon favorably in committee, and to reach the floor of the federation convention, where th insisted it had an excellent chan of adoption.

Induce Men to Wear Cotton and Aid N. E., Says Mrs. Rogers

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 30.—"Start with the school children, then induce the men to accept cotton suitings for their own use, if you want to help bring the cotton manufacturing industry back in New England," said Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, member of Congress from Lowell, Mass., before the New England conference of women's clubs here.

"Cotton will be accepted for dress goods by women," she said," if it can be made unwrinkable. But if so we must start with the school children, as the Lowell people did. The men look to the women to help bring the cotton industry back in New England, because they use the material in the home.

STRIKE IS OFF; PUPILS GO BACK

Gary, Ind., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—The pupils of Emerson High school on strike this week because of the enrollment of negroes, returned to their classes today following a ten-minute mass meeting at which terms of settlement were explained.

All but three of the negroes were removed to temporary quarters in a junior high school, pending erection of the $15,000 building provided in a bill passed to final reading in the city council. The three remaining are seniors and have attended Emerson for three years.

DRASTIC CUT IN TAXES URGED BY SHAW

director of the State income tax division.

Shaw declared the study was undertaken with a view to correlation of the tax laws into a more nearly scientific system of tax burden distribution, having in mind these four important objects:

1—To simplify the tax law so far as possible.

2—To equalize the real burden of taxation wherever it is pressing too severely.

3—To spread out the tax burden in a thinner film over all the inhabitants.

4—To reduce the rates wherever possible without imperiling the necessary revenues.

ONLY FEW PAY.

In stating objections to the personal income tax law, he disclosed that less than 6 per cent of the inhabitants actually paid an income tax in 1926. More than 130,000 returns, he said, were filed showing no income tax liability.

The present rate of 6 per cent. on investment income is more than double the highest effective rate in any contiguous State, most of the States having no income tax, he pointed out.

He advocated elimination of the 130,000 fruitless returns and the insertion of a clause for a joint return of husband and wife.

Relief for real estate, now bearing 80 per cent. of the burden, he declared must come and recommended a study be made of present exemptions on property held for religious, benevolent, charitable and scientific purposes.

Among numerous interest items that might be taxed, he declared, is that from income on State and municipal bonds and notes. He proposed a rate of 2 per cent. on this.

Interest from savings deposits should be taxed.

The changes suggested by Shaw were estimated to bring in a revenue of $16,650,000, compared with $16,630,000 for 1927.

WINS DIVORCE FROM HIS 'HOPE CHEST' BRIDE

Divorce today placed one more recordin the Yetten archives, begun seven years ago when LeBaron R. Yetten, of Waltham, eloped with Elaine Larson MacLean, only to see his romance shatter a few months later when his bride was charged with stealing his sister's hope chest.

Yetten's sister made the charge and secured an indictment in September of 1920, and from the time of that incident, Yetten was a deserted husband, he testified today in Middlesex Probate Court, prior to receiving his divorce.

Yetten, who now lives in Columbus road, Waltham, while his divorced wife lives in Brookline, testified before Judge Leggat that he eloped to New York in March 27, 1920. Thereafter he lived with his bride in Waltham and West Newton.

In the folowing September, he testified, he was called home when his 24-year-old wife was arrested on a secret indictment, charged with stealing $2,000 worth of fine linens from the hope chest of Miss Lucille Yetten. The couple never lived together afterwards, he said.

Mrs. Yetten was indicted in the Nathan Tufts regime and she pleaded not guilty when arragned. Innumerable postponements of the case followed until finally, a year later, District Attorney Saltonstall nol prossed the indictment.

In interviews at the time, the accused bride charged that her sister-in-law had trumped up the theft charge because Mrs. Yetten was the "pet" of her mother-in-law and the sister-in-law was jealous.

DENTALS DROP IN HARVARD'S 7,785 LIST

Good news came out of Harvard today when the partial registration figures showed that fewer men want to be dentists and more than usual have registered for less pain-producing pursuits, for instance, landscape architecture.

The first four days of registering shows a total of 7,785 students signed up in all departments, with the grand total expected to be a bit above 8,000. Last year in the first four days, 7,749 men registered.

These are the registration to date and the comparison with last year's figures for the first four days:

Regular college, 3,241 against 3,262 for 1926; special, 42 against 54 for 1926; Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, 850, last year same; School of Arcitecture, 78 against 69; Bussey Institute, 11 against 16; Business College, 730 against 726; College of Education, 246 against 277; theology, 83 against 93; law, 1,508 against 1,417; medicine, 519 against 503; public health, 13 against 31; dental, 131 against 149; engineering, 275 against 265.

DISCOVER METEOR THAT LEVELED HUGE FOREST

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Scientists have at last found the resting place of the giant meteor that fell 19 years ago in a remote region of Yenesei Province, Siberia, and, breaking like an exploding rocket, leveled a forest 15 miles in circumference.

The Soviet Union Information Bureau here said today the site of the fallen meteor, estimated to have weighed nearly half a million tons, is a mile in diameter. The Soviet Academy of Science, which made the discovery, is planning to extract the fragments, believed to consist of iron, nickel and platinum.

Champion Pennant Down in Tornado; St. Louis Grieves

St. Louis, Sept. 30. (A.P.).—Cardinal fans today grievingly recalled the ironical coincidence of yesterday when the tornado blew down the flag pole at Sportsman's Park just as the world's champions took a defeat at the hands of Cincinnati and thereby virtually lost their chance of hanging a new pennant from the tall pole.

The roof of the new pavilion at the park and many iron girders were torn loose and hurled to the diamond, where thousands of loyal Cardinal fans had hoped to see another World Series.

"Even Nature is against us," one ardent fan said plaintively.

HOLD LAWYER WHO HELPED BEACH HIDE

May's Landing, N. J., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Edison Hedges, of Atlantic City, counsel for Willis Beach, wanted for complicity in the murder of Dr. A. William Lilliendahl, near Hammonton, Sept. 15, was held today in $1,000 bail on two charges of obstructing justice.

Ball was furnished by B. Louis Blumberg, an Atlantic City lawyer, who is tax supervisor of Atlantic County.

"I have been indicted," said Hedges in a statement to the court, "and undoubtedly there is some evidence which would tend to substantiate the indictments.

"However, if I had been heard by the Grand Jury, I believe I would have been vindicated. These indictments were only for the purpose of finding out where Beach is. I made no statement to any reporter that I told Beach to leave this jurisdiction. I made no statement that I knew where Beach was."

That he saw two negroes hold up the Lilliendahl automobile, shoot Dr. A. Lilliendahl and rob his wife is the story said to have been told to detectives by Albert Langbon.

He was arrested in Hoboken as a material witness. The evidence he is reported to have given the detectives tends to corroborate the story told by Mrs. Lilliendahl.

DR. ANNE BESANT, AT 80, FEARS NEW WAR IN EUROPE

London, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Dr. Anne Besant, theosophist, returned to London to celebrate her eightieth birthday anniversary tomorrow, haunted by a fear of another European war. "The nations are embittered," she told interviewers, "and unless it is forestalled war is bound to come. I am very much afraid for Europe."

She was enthusistic in discussing her airplane tour of Europe in which she travelled thousands of miles and visited a dozen capitals. She declared the air is the greatest route to use in traveling. "I am marvellously well," she said, "but then I am a vegetarian, a non-smoker and a teetotaller."

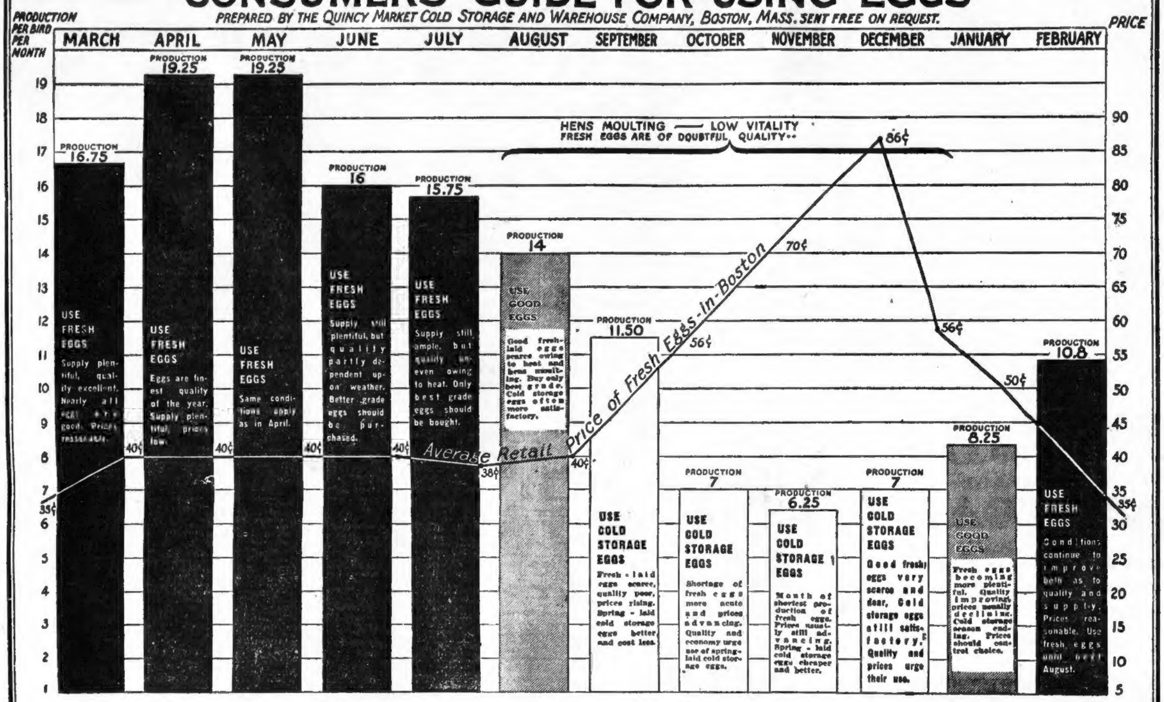
CONSUMERS' GUIDE FOR USING EGGS

PREPARED BY THE QUINCY MARKET COLD STORAGE AND WAREHOUSE COMPANY, BOSTON, MASS. SENT FREE ON REQUEST.



BLACK COLUMNS = USE FRESH EGGS
SHADED COLUMNS = LET PRICE AND QUALITY DETERMINE YOUR CHOICE
WHITE COLUMNS = USE COLD STORAGE EGGS

HEIGHT OF COLUMNS REPRESENTS VOLUME OF EGG PRODUCTION BASED ON SEASONAL LAY OF AVERAGE FLOCKS AS SURVEYED BY VARIOUS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGES.

This chart with proper revisions was made possible through the courtesy of Armour & Company

This Chart will tell you "Which" eggs to use and "When".—It's FREE—MAIL COUPON.

Do you know that eggs which go into Cold Storage (laid from March to July) are the highest quality eggs produced during the entire year?

In the spring-time, all nature is happy to be alive. And that's the time when the nation's hens fit themselves right into the spirit of the occasion by laying the year's biggest, finest, most full-flavored and delicious eggs.

As the above chart shows, half of America's annual supply of eggs are laid during the spring months. There are more eggs than people can use. And the prices are lower than at any other time of the year.

The very best of these spring eggs are hurried to the cold storage warehouses in refrigerator cars. There they are kept under scientific refrigeration until this season of the year—when fresh-laid eggs are scarce.

Were it not for those surplus spring-laid-eggs—stored away—there would be a severe shortage.

But thanks to the great public service which scientific refrigeration renders you can have the finest eggs of the year—as delicious and full-flavored as they were when laid—and at prices remarkably low.

In cold storage warehouses, these eggs have been kept at a uniform temperature of 30½ degrees. This prevents even the slightest deterioration — maintains the original quality until they come to your table.

Try a dozen, today. Your grocer has them. Look in his window for the Sign, the Mark of a Good Egg.

Be sure to mail the coupon for a free copy of this Egg Chart. Use it as your guide in buying eggs. It will help you to keep up the quality of the eggs you use—and to keep the cost down.

You will also find the free booklet, "The Refrigerator of a Nation" most interesting. It tells in detail the romantic story of scientific refrigeration and its great importance in American life. Send the coupon—today.

'Snowman' Replies to Fair Forcaster

By PAUL FRANCIS "SNOWMAN."

Gotta write a letter.

Miss Faith Mary Snow of Chapin street, Holyoke.

Dear Faith:

Yours is the most unusual communication that has been received thus far and it is with sodden, salty tears that I inform you of the inadmissibility of your entry into the grand coal-coke-and-snow forecasting joust.

Many letters have forecast even the date of the coal or coke delivery so the fuel-burning connection in the [illegible] is not amiss.

You are ineligible Faith because you live in Holyoke which is a great distance from Boston, starting point of the coal or coke deliveries be they assigned to whomsoever they may, and you can visualize for yourself what an uneconomic toting it would be to lug three tons of coal (first delivery for the nearest snowfall forecast) all the way to Holyoke from the wharves at the Hub seaboard.

WHEN YOU WANT MORE JUST SPEAK RIGHT UP!

DON'T ENVY THE SUCCESSFUL PROGNOSTICATOR—BE ONE!!

That is why, Faith, myself (tis the Snowman, a 'nom de plume' of course) and the thoughtful who have arranged this combat at prognostication have decreed that no coal shall go to such Newcastles as yourself, who live in such distant places and whose thoughts and reveries are of such high and volatile moment that the throwing on of mere material fuel would be but a vain and also vainglorious gesture, indeed.

Until I had perused your letter three Faith I had thought you to be but sixteen, the age of dreaming and fancying of hand clasps back of the head and gazings into the cloud-flecked blue above. These, of course, must be always in the Summertime. But you are only eighteen, and this is not an advanced age.

You append a postscript, Faith, in which you say you are lonely and would like to have some girls of your own age correspond with you. Under different circumstances, I would turn this part of the communication over to George MacKinnon who once was the "Lonely Heart" Editor and who now is the Wisdom Editor of the Boston Advertiser.

But I don't know, Faith, when a man begins to put on flesh and carry his own lunch, one's faith in one's fellow man recedes to a low ebb, indeed. He even carries a Thermos bottle.

Returning again to the forecast game, Faith. Undoubtedly you did not read that the rules of the game state that a forecaster must be a resident of Metropolitan Boston, that the day and time of day must be included in the forecast and that forecasters must explain, in a note of NOT MORE THAN FIFTY WORDS how she or he arrived at the forecast.

SORRY Faith, BUT RULES IS RULES!
P.F. SNOWMAN Faith

"HE HATH DENIED THE FAITH"

I am receiving many letters Faith, but yours is the first that has picked a certain day—November 28—because of the fact that it is a birthday. And, also, you are the first person named Snow to enter into this Snow forecast, just and it is really too bad that circumstances are not other than as outlined here.

Personally, Faith, I defy the artist to draw any picture of and pertaining to this day's story of snow forecasting but "Tex" Masterson is a keen and established persuader, even if abbreviated and rotund.

And that's it for the "Snow Man's" letter to Faith. Have YOU in Metropolitan Boston sent in your forecast yet, making a bid for these six tons of coal and six tons of coke to be handed the six persons forecasting the date and time nearest the first actual snowfall in the same Metropolitan District?

The coal is kindly donated by E. S. Morse & Co. of Medford street, Charlestown, and the coke by the New England Coal and Coke Co. of Stuart street. George Loveland, meteorologist at the Boston Weather Bureau, will be judge of the predictions.

Well, so long and don't forget to write. Send your predictions to "Snow Man," Boston Evening American, No. 5 Winthrop square.

Cleared of Theft

Springfield, Sept. 30 (A.P.)—A verdict of not guilty was returned today by a jury in the case of Irving M. Fuller of Sunderland charged with the larceny of more than $100 of State funds through alleged irregularities in tuberculine cattle tests.

CHEMICAL FIRM SUES N. E. DRY DIRECTOR

Providence, Sept. 30 (A.P.)—The charge that Captain George A. Parker, Federal prohibition administrator of New England, is "unreasonable, unjust and opposed to the spirit of the national prohibition act" is contained in an equity suit filed in United States Court here today by Achille Guercia of this city, owner of the Federal Chemical Company.

The bill contends Captain Parker [illegible] refusal.

The company [illegible] No date has been set for a hearing.

CHOKES HER IN 'QUIET' TALK ON DIVORCE

In the midst of a discussion on getting a quiet divorce Earl H. Field of No. 68 Washburn avenue, Auburndale, seized his wife, Ivy, by the throat and choked her into insensibility, she testified in Newton District Court today.

It developed that the couple have been twice married and a second divorce case, brought by Mrs. Field, is now pending in Middlesex Probate Court.

Judge [illegible] Field of assault and battery on his wife, and continued the case until tomorrow, when the defendant said he intended to appeal.

Field was arrested for assault and battery on July 1[illegible], but the case did not come up until today. His counsel informed Judge Bacon the couple were divorced once, were remarried and a second divorce suit is pending.

Mrs. Field testified that their 17-year-old son being away at camp they had decided to get a quiet divorce, having agreed life together was impossible. In the midst of a [illegible] said.

Seizing a pair of scissors, Mrs. Field said she attempted to [illegible] away, but he [illegible] with the scissors.

INJUNCTION ORDERS EVICTION OF MINERS

Pittsburgh, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—A preliminary injunction, restraining the United Mine Workers from attempting to retain striking miners in houses owned by the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, was granted in Federal Court here today by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker.

The corporation had sought a sweeping injunction against the union, asking for $1 [illegible] damages. The preliminary injunction contained only the eviction phase.

AIR LINES MUST RUN ON TIME, SAYS KENISTON

Only by regularly operated systems of airlines linking together the commercial centres of New England can this section derive all the benefits from aviation, William S. Keniston, airport builder of Concord, declared today at Hotel Statler, where the New England aviation conference was held under the auspices of the New England Council.

Six routes were suggested by the speaker, as follows:

Boston to New York via Worcester, Hartford and New Haven.

Boston to Troy, N. Y., via Gardner and Greenfield.

Boston to Montreal via Concord, N. H., Montpelier and Burlington, Vt.

Providence to Portland, Me., via Worcester, Gardner and Concord, N. H.

Bar Harbor, Me., to Boston via Bangor, Augusta and Portland.

New York to Montreal via New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Greenfield, Claremont, N. H., Rutland and Burlington, Vt.

Both Keniston and Attorney Raymond C. Baldwin of Boston, emphasized the distinction between airports and flying fields and said the smaller cities and towns need only the latter—fields without hangars but leveled and lighted for landings.

NEED MORE AIRPORTS.

"From 20 to 30 airports are required in New England," said Keniston. "There are now eight. I believe the remaining commercial centers not equipped with airports are seeking to get them.

"Probably they can be constructed and equipped for an average cost of $35,000 including land.

"Flying fields between these airports should number 24 to 36, of which there are now about six. These will average to cost about $6,000.

"It is safe to say the more numerous these flying fields are along the main routes the greater will be the confidence of the public in air transportation."

EACH HAS ITS CHOICE.

Baldwin, who is attorney for the Boston Airport Corporation, Harvard Flying Club and other aeronautical organizations, declared careful study would show each community where it fits in the general scheme—whether it needs an airport, a flying field or only its name painted on the largest roofs.

Plans for a complete survey were announced by Col. Sanford F. Thompson of the Thompson & Lichtner Company, Inc.

Ton of Dynamite to Be Exploded in Dracut Quarry

Lowell, Sept. 30.—If you hear a terrific noise late this afternoon, don't be alarmed. It won't be an earthquake, but the noise of the biggest blast of dynamite ever set off in this vicinity.

One ton of dynamite will be exploded by Anthony Pallatto, local contractor, at his quarry in Dracut, in an effort to loosen 46,000 tons of stone. Four holes, 75 feet deep, have been drilled, into which the dynamite will be placed.

CAFE MAN HELD WHEN HIS CHECKS COME BACK

Charged with passing alleged worthless checks, two of them on Salvatore Carivelli, manager of Sammy Fuller, the boxer, Arthur R. Koubik of Minneapolis, Minn., was held in $2,000 bail today before Judge Duff in municipal court.

According to the police, Koubik registered at a Boston hotel as L. A. La Vartis, proprietor of a cafe in Mexico. He met Carivelli, who says he cashed two checks, one for $35 and the other for $15. They came back. The hotel also looked up a $10 check, with the result that Koubik was arrested.

3 GIRLS HURT IN TRIPLE AUTO CRASH

Two South Boston and one Dorchester young women are today recovering from injuries received as a result of a triple automobile crash on the Strandway, opposite Covington street, South Boston and as a result of which traffic was tied up for sometime.

The victims were Miss Mary Dillon, 28, of No. 252 West Second street, and Miss Mary Sweeney of No. 177 Taylor street, South Boston, and Miss Florence Craven of No. 53 Columbia road, Dorchester.

Florence Craven.

The first two were passengers in the machine driven by George A. Hinson of No. 53 Woodward street, South Boston, and Miss Craven was in the car operated by Sherman Hutchinson of No. 11 Bodwell street, Dorchester.

WOMAN KILLED IN MYSTERY EXPLOSION

New York, Sept 30 (A.P.)—An explosion of mysterious origin in a Bronx apartment house today killed a woman, broke a score of windows and drove out 48 families in their night apparel.

The sole victim, Mrs. Clara Kilbourn, was found dead in the kitchen of her apartment. Her husband, asleep when the explosion occurred, was blown out of bed.

THOMPSON TO OUST CHICAGO 'BLUENOSES'

Chicago, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Resignation from the School Board of those members who have aligned themselves with Superintendent William McAndrew was demanded today by Mayor William Hale Thompson. McAndrew went to trial before the board on charge of insubordination and un-Americanism in the conduct of the schools.

The mayor said "King George of England must keep his nose out of Chicago public schools," alluding to charges of pro-British propaganda which he has charged McAndrew with sponsoring in the classroom.

"The six school board members who stand staunchly for American ideals are going to run the board," the mayor said. "The 'Bluenoses' are in the hopeless minority, and would get off if they had any decency."

Trial of the superintendent, whose conduct of the schools was the principal issue on which Mayor Thompson campaigned for office, has been continued until October 6, the continuation having been taken over the objections of McAndrew's attorneys.

The sixteen accusations against the superintendent include charges that he recommended history textbooks which were pro-British; that he refused to permit contributions from school children toward the fund for restoration of "Old Ironsides" and that he was "insolent, unsubordinate and domineering" toward the school board on numerous occasions.

SEIZE 5 IN PLOT TO KILL MAYOR OF JERUSALEM

Jerusalem, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Five persons were arrested today and held without bail charged with complicity in a plot to assassinate Mayor Nashashibi of Jerusalem and two of his friends.

One of the prisoners is an official of the Moslem Supreme Council.

Pope Vexes Teutons by Lauding U. S. War Deeds

Rome, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—The recent visit of the American Legion party to the Vatican has caused a slight diplomatic incident, Germany and Austria having demonstrated in friendly fashion about passages in the address made by the Pope in referring to "the contribution by young America in that decisive moment for the future of old Europe and the whole world."

The words were considered by these two countries as rather a pro-ally demonstration on the part of the Pontiff.

It is understood the incident will have no further developments after the explanations given by Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal secretary, that the Pope merely meant to allude to historic facts which cannot be denied.

NURSE IS FREED IN KILLING OF PASTOR'S WIFE

Enid, Okla., Sept. 30 (A. P.).—Mary Atkinson, 26-year-old trained nurse, today was freed from charges of poisoning Mary Jane Wiley, 18-year-old daughter of an Episcopal minister with whom she was infatuated. David Eaglesome, justice of peace, who presided over the nurse's preliminary hearing, ruled that evidence was insufficient to hold the woman for trial in district court.

Instal Dr. Pease November 4

Amherst, Sept. 30 (A. P.).—Plans were complete today for the inauguration of Dr. Arthur Stanley Pease as president of Amherst College on November 4.

Coolidge Changes Old Black-Rimmed Specs for Gold Ones

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—President Coolidge apparently has abandoned his comfortable old black-rimmed glasses, with bows that fit snugly behind the ears, for a new pair of pince-nez, with a gold nose brace and a long black cord.

He wore his new spectacles for the first time in public at the Pan American Union building when he read his formal conversation with President Calles of Mexico over the long-distance telephone. Mr. Coolidge uses glasses only when he reads.

"1 IN 4 VOTER" A 25 P.C. AMERICAN, SAYS SMITH

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Governor Smith has discovered a new American—the "25 per cent" citizen who votes only once in four years.

Replying to a statement by Senator John Knight that the man who votes once in four years should be the determining factor in the election of a Governor, Smith told the Democratic State convention here that the "25 per cent." citizen is the man who has so little interest in the State that he votes only when there is a President running.

1,000 ATTEND RADIO TRADE DINNER

With 1,000 men and women attending, the first annual New England radio trade dinner was written down today in the radio logs as a redletter event for enthusiasm, interest and development and exchange of ideas of general and specific importance. The dinner was at the Hotel Statler, with persons present from all over the country.

The chief speaker was Orestes H. Caldwell, Federal Radio Commissioner, who outlined the problems confronting his commission. A splendid program was given, which was heard by many thousands all over New England, through their radio sets.

"Every ingenuity and technical resource has been resorted to by the commission to minimize broadcasting interference," said Mr. Caldwell, "Receiving conditions undoubtedly have been greatly improved. But heterodynes are not yet entirely eliminated, nor will they be until we have closed down at least 250 stations—the number which came on during the breakdown of the law—came on against the advice of government officials who had already served notice that the air was overcrowded

"These 250 stations cannot be shut down summarily by refusing them license, even in the public interest. For it must be remembered that the Radio Law of 1927 gives to the commission no power to close down a single station which was licensed and operating prior to Feb. 23, 1927.

Licenses can be revoked in the case of stations which fail to obey the provisions of the law or the regulations of the commission, but any easy method of providing needed relief for the listeners by simply wiping out a lot of less desirable stations has not been legally possible."

Allen M'Quhae, Irish tenor of the Atwater Kent Hour fame, and "The Silver Masked Tenor" made personal appearances at the Radio-Aero Show in Mechanics Building and later appeared at the Radio Trade dinner.

For quality of reception

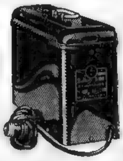
is a virtual necessity



The high voltage power tubes necessary for quality reproduction make "B" batteries uneconomical. Light socket "B" power is a virtual necessity.

Whether the "B" power supply you buy is more economical than batteries depends upon its length of life. Hence the popularity of Balkite "B."

Balkite "B" is a permanent piece of equipment. It has nothing to wear out or replace. 300,000 units in actual use have shown that it lasts longer than any other device in radio. It will outlast dozens of "B" batteries. The first Balkite "B," after 5 years of service, is still as good as new.

Three models, 90 to 180 volts. Ask your dealer.

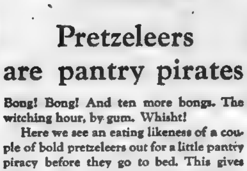
Bite yourself an Alphabet



Pretzeleers are pantry pirates

Bong! Bong! And ten more bongs. The witching hour, by gum. Whisht!

Here we see an eating likeness of a couple of bold pretzeleers out for a little pantry piracy before they go to bed. This gives Father a chance to take a little more nourishment, and also to bite out his next morning's breakfast order:

Which, as any good pretzeleer knows, stands for ham and eggs.

Night biting isn't at all unusual in the homes of those who pretzel. O-So-Guds are so tasty and so easy to digest that they are a favorite midnight lunch.

No wonder. These pretzels, baked by Uneeda Bakers, are brittle, and crispy, and crunchy, and salty. They're just as good between meals as they are with soup, or salad, or sardines, or cheese, or with iced drinks.

Children love them, and rightly too. They are good for children.

Buy them by the pound. There's a lot of goodness tied up in each and every one.

Radio Dialog

SINCE the first annual radio trade banquet was the biggest ever held we are supposed to say something about it. A. C. Marquardt, Sheldon Fairbanks, General Edwards, Commissioner O. H. Caldwell were the speakers. Then the fun began.

For us the fun began when we tried to find the press table. We were told to sit anywhere if we had a ticket. But since we had reserved a whole table this was slightly undesirable.

We finally got somewhere and after a couple of hours the entertainment started.

It took us practically no time to receive more impressions. Walter Myers talking to himself at the microphones, while audience pleaded vainly for a speech. Friendly Maids and Wooden Dutch Girls same. We mean wooden shoes—evidently because they wouldn't fit Sandy MacFarlane.

NEW BEDFORD BANKER SEES SLUMP IN MARRIAGES

There is a slump in the marriage market. At least co-operative bankers believe so.

It's either that or the three room kitchenette apartment with its cozy intimacy is replacing the cottage small.

At any rate there are "few couples sanely contemplating marriage" these days.

Responsible for these assertions is William F. Desmond of New Bedford, president of the Massachusetts Cooperative Bank League, at the last session of its thirty-ninth annual convention at the New Ocean House, Swampscott.

"Either the ideal way of living—the self-owned bungalow idea—isn't appealing to the younger generation or they haven't the cash," Mr. Desmond explained. "It is true that two persons get married, not to build their own home primarily but to be near each other. Of course, the couple who sanely contemplate matrimony have a bankroll, however small, tucked away in some bank on which they can draw when the holy bonds are sealed and the blue prints can be executed.

AMERICAN HOME SLOGAN.

"Our slogan is 'The American Home, the safeguard of civil liberties' and this we back in our attractive offerings to young folks to save for the materialization of that day.

"The old budgeting idea held out that a family should pay as much rent a month as the income was weekly. And that still holds true with co-operative building. If a man earns $50 a week his home should cost him $5,000 or from $4,200 to $6,000 at the very most. He must then put away, monthly, aside from his incidentals, $10 for every thousand he has invested in his house. If it stands him $5,000 then he should lay aside $50 and so on up the scale.

"A young man about to be married with the idea of owning his own home should have one-third at least of the amount he wishes to spend on his house. Any co-operative bank will then advance him on a loan what he needs for the balance of the encumbrance. Of course, the larger the loan, the greater the expense and what with the always approaching need for a double baby carriage newlyweds must plan sagaciously.

A HELP IN SAVING.

"In our bank in New Bedford our co-operative savers among single men run from 28 to 35 years of age. This way of saving is great help since by our system of banking we pay larger dividends. For a dollar a month for a period of twelve years a saver accrues $200 which he can either withdraw at the time of maturity or get instead a matured share certificate.

"At present there is a slump in the real estate markets and co-operative banks are finding it hard to place their money out for loans or building. What with newly-weds seeking the ready made comforts of the apartments rather than the made to order luxuries of their own home the building boom is nothing at all.

"Much has been accomplished during the fifty years and a great service has been rendered the people, but co-operative banks are merely standing on the threshold of their usefulness. Until every family in the State knows about this opportunity to better its position by systematically saving money and by owning a home of its own our task will not be accomplished.

"Ours is a task for humanity, enabling shareholders to create wealth for themselves."

Isadora's Triumph on Russian Stage

(Fred Toye, of the Boston Evening American staff, was an intimate friend of Isadora Duncan for seventeen years and for seven years he directed her theatrical appearances in this country and Europe. Here is the fourteenth installment of his splendidly told story of her unparalleled life.)

THE LIFE AND LOVES OF ISADORA DUNCAN

By FRED TOYE

Chapter 14

BEFORE reaching her decision to abandon Berlin definitely, Isadora found her way into Russia. If she had shown courage and a high purpose heretofore, she now displayed a temerity equal to that of the bravest pioneers and most reckless reformers. In Berlin she had, among other troubles, encountered the bitterest opposition from the established ballet of the opera

She used to complain that members of the ballet and their friends used to scatter tacks upon the felt ground-cloth on her stage just before performances. Isadora's popularity rendered some of the conventional ballet stars furious with envy

In St. Petersburg and Moscow Isadora was to run counter to an institution established nearly 200 years, whose devotees were protected and pampered by the czars and grand dukes and oil barons of the land The Russian ballet had had its origin in France in the early 1700's, whence it had come from Italy

The Russians brought the spectacle to a state of unimagined magnificence and, with imported Italian and French ballet masters had established two great schools of the ballet at St. Petersburg and Moscow, respectively, which served to supply the dancers for the great ballet spectacles given in the opera houses of those two cities.

SCORES IN RUSSIA

Determined to make their ballet the most admired in all the world the sponsors and their successors had established rules of training which involved starting the training of children at the age of five years and carrying it through to maturity. Hence a skill that was a marvel to behold. Great, elaborate spectacles were built around the dancers, and the greatest composers wrote music for the ballet.

Pavlowa was the pet of St. Petersburg, and Mordkin the bright star of Moscow. Each represented the highest achievement of the two respective schools, and each visited the opera house of the other for "guest" performances. It was thus that the two were engaged for a joint tour of Europe when Diagheleff organized his Russian ballet for its first excursion out of the snow-bound regions of the Czar.

With nothing but her few rags of filmsy costume, a blue-grey stage drapery, and her orchestral scores of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony the operas of Gluck and some Brahms and Schubert numbers, the audacious Isadora invaded the stronghold of the magnificent Russian ballet.

WINS OVER FOKINE

She swept everything before her. Success was instantaneous, and in an incredibly short time she had taken complete possession of one of the most passionately devoted publics that it is possible for an artist to reach.

Mikail Fokine, master of the Imperial ballet, was overwhelmed with admiration for her art. Immediately he set about revising the long established system of training. He studied her movements and gestures, and quickly incorporated into his own productions all the elements of Isadora's art which he was able to assimilate.

The officials of the Imperial Russian Opera House went so far as to place a tablet over the entrance of the training room of the dancers reading that it was the purpose of the school to copy the principles of Isadora Duncan's art.

The achievement can only be understood in its entirety by those familiar with the diametrically opposed views of Isadora and the traditional ballet master. Their systems of training were as opposite as the poles. The ballet taught acrobatics; Isadora taught suppleness. The ballet fascinated by means of wire-jointed doll-like gestures; Isadora charmed with the apparent extreme naturalness of her postures and movements.

The ballet depended upon fanciful costume, elaborate scenery and elementary pantomime to tell its story; Isadora fixed the observer's attention solely upon the beauty of the human body in movement, subordinating all appurtenances.

A lasting result of this visit was a warm friendship which arose between Isadora and Pavlowa. Likewise, the American dancer and Fokine maintained an enduring friendship and a sincere admiration for each other's art.

Isadora, always bitter against girls who undertook dancing careers in frank imitation of her work, felt complimented, however, that these two schools, so traditionally opposed to her school of the dance, should attempt to incorporate her ideas into their regime.

HER TROUBLES IN PARIS

Likewise, when a few months later the Berlin Royal Opera House clothed its dancers in flowing drapery, discarding crinoline, tights and stays, she gracefully accepted the compliment. The stage of that theatre had been barred to her, but her ideas had finally prevailed.

The Russian successes encouraged Isadora to believe that the brilliant Paris public would likewise receive her with open arms. Blissfully unaware of the fact that nine-tenths of the theatrical and musical ventures of the French capital were run at a dead loss, and were presented merely for the purpose of increasing the esteem of a singer or actress in the

Master Operations Will Be Pictured for Rural Practitioners In War on Disease

New York City, Sept. 30 (I. N.S.).—Motion pictures to teach surgery and medicine have become a reality, according to an announcement made today by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

The first two of an extensive series being produced by the Eastman Kodak Company for the American College of Surgeons will be shown at the annual meeting of that body in Detroit October 3 to 7.

Pictures will be made available, through sale or rental for doctors, hospitals and nurses throughout the world. Surgeons in out-of-the way localities may rent pictures showing operations of masters

A small town hospital wants to give its patients the same treatment that is given in the larger hospitals. Films may be rented that will show in detail the most modern methods.

TREATMENT OF HAND.

The two pictures prepared under supervision of eminent men selected by the board on medical motion picture films of the American College of Surgeons are "Infections of the Hand" and "Nursing Our Neighbors."

The first picture, which shows important methods of operations for treating hands, is expected to be of great value to surgeons who treat persons injured in accidents in industrial plants. This will teach surgeons everywhere the most modern ways of saving hands and fingers that under many conditions would be amputated.

The picture on "Nursing" has to do with the most approved methods of hospital standardization and

Wilson's Personal Power Recognized by His College Mates

CHAPTER 6

IT was not merely from books that stimulation came to the young student. He had before his very eyes one of the great dramas of American political life. In November, 1876,—the year he was a sophomore—[illegible] the Hayes-Tilden election with its indetermin[illegible] result [illegible] of the struggle in the halls of Congress and the whole vast dust of discussion of constitutional machinery which arose out of it.

We know that the issues were hotly discussed among the students, and that to many an ardent young Democrat the seating of Hayes in [illegible] liberated flouting of the will of the people.

To Wilson the complications and uncertainties of the A[illegible] system, the rigidity of our constitutional division of [illegible] interest [illegible] British parliamentary method of [illegible]

[illegible]

There are many evidences that Wilson, the sophomore, thought deeply upon this [illegible] find a reason for it. During a long walk in the country he propounded this question to a classmate, [illegible] Woods:

"Have you ever thought of the reason for the decline of American oratory?"

FOUND ORATORY WANING.

He went on with a kind of passion of interest to inquire why America no longer produced Patrick Henrys, Websters, Clays [illegible] developed [illegible] which was [illegible] to become a keynote of his [illegible] writing that it was due to the [illegible] mechanism of committee government in Congress.

In England great [illegible] oratory [illegible] Commons and governments rose or fell by virtue of the force of its leaders as orators and debaters but in America everything was cut and dried beforehand by decisions formed [illegible] committee rooms.

Oils and Coppers Selling Below Prices a Year Ago

B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—All classes of shares have not risen dizzily.

Take two important groups—oils and coppers. Comparison of quotations now and a year ago make a very [illegible] showing [illegible] that [illegible] our recent comparison of [illegible] railway [illegible] ity [illegible] industrial [illegible] combination revealed [illegible] 766 [illegible] cited [illegible] the [illegible] higher than a year ago.

From the accompanying tables you will see that of a list of thirty oils no fewer than [illegible] are selling below a year ago.

Of seventeen copper stocks only seven are [illegible] than at this time last year.

What course, do you think, the largest investors—men of the George F. Baker type, for example—follow? Do you imagine for a moment that they load up with stocks after the market has reached the highest peak ever touched?

No. The most successful investing in stocks is done by accumulating heavily when almost everybody else is bearish and prices are very low. Very recently the New York Stock Exchange "average" quotations rose to heights never before approached and, as a matter of fact, are still not far from the top.

One of America's leading bankers, while talking on another subject, incidentally mentioned an oil company and added: "It's stock is down now but, of course, it will come back." My guess is that if our Bakers and Morgans and Mellons and Baruchs are purchasing any stocks these days, they are not climbing issues which are selling at unprecedentedly high prices, but are, rather, picking up meritorious oil, copper, rubber, utility and other stocks which have been either sold to a standstill or largely neglected. I cannot conceive of their loading up with Baldwin Locomotive or Houston Oil or even railway issues which have been marked up $50 to $150 a share.

"Buy when everybody wants to sell" is a tested and tried Wall Street maxim. Well few people have been displaying any tremendous eagerness to scramble for oil shares or for copper shares.

Of course, it is true that the oil industry has been and still is in deplorable condition. And it is also true that the copper industry has been struggling against low prices for a long time. Were this not so, it would not be possible to pick up the shares of trustworthy companies at the quotations now ruling.

Do you recall the wheeze about the old farmer who refused to become panicky when all his neighbors were terribly excited over a long-continued rain? He explained that, in all his 80 years of life there was only one rain which didn't stop. Then he added: "That's this one—and I'm quite sure it will stop, too."

Now, in nearly a quarter of a century's experience in Wall Street, I have seen practically every industry encounter spells of hard times—the railroad, the steel, the traction, the copper, the utility, the oil, the motor, etc., industries have all had their bad turns. But the sound, well-managed companies always came back.

Just so will the stormy weather, which has afflicted the oil and the copper industries, clear up one day.

'COLLEGE COST IS JUSTIFIED BY RESULTS'

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

Writer in the current number of Century asks whether the present cost of sending our young people to college is justified. President Angell of Yale writes about the "overpopulation of American Colleges. [illegible] published an extensive article by Howard Elliott, predecessor of E. J. Pearson as president of the New [illegible] cost of [illegible] is justified by results. Mr. Elliott has just been elected head of the Harvard Board of Overseers.

Eliot Wadsworth, cited in this column September 28 as one of the examples of able citizens who had been induced to serve Boston in a high official capacity without pay, has also just been named chairman of the Harvard executive committee.

Harvard admits the new record total of 7414 students. Columbia sets a fresh high mark of registration by crossing the 35,000 figure. Most colleges show student gains. The figures as a whole are another index of American prosperity—long may it wave.

Perhaps too many people are being educated to follow professions already overcrowded. But more professions could profit by collegiate training. Boston leaders in business and finance are constantly calling for more trained workers. Herein lie some college possibilities for the future.

State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin tells me more than $600,000 is annually taken in fines through the Bay State courts from violations of automobile laws. This is now used to build new roads, along with the sums received from automobile registrations. The idea was advanced through this column recently that this "fine" money be turned over to Registrar Goodwin's department to make the highways safer. I understand it will come up for consideration by the next Legislature.

Those two "Safety Weeks" having ended, we confess we have never been able to see why a safety program shouldn't last all the weeks of the year. Senator Henry I. Kincaide of Quincy had this ideal partially in mind when he suggested the granite manufacturers and their employes could put into effect a safety campaign that would cover every working day of the year.

One of our own suggestions contributed to the National Safety Week just ended was that motorists approaching a grade crossing, one side of which is blind, alight from the auto and make sure a train is not approaching before going on. We expressed our realization that most people would think this going to too much trouble, though some of us value our lives rather highly.

* * *

It does not look as if we would soon be relieved of the grade crossing menace, as a result of which a toll of one-twentieth of all auto casualties is recorded. Elimination of the 234,280 grade crossings in the United States is "unthinkable," Charles E. Hill, general safety agent, New York Central Railroad, declares. Abolition of such crossings would cost [illegible]

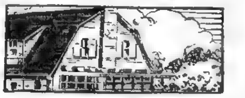
BOSTON AMERICAN HOME BUILDERS BUREAU



BUILDING INSPECTION PROTECTS PURCHASER

GOOD BUILDERS NOW EXCEEDING BASIC CONSTRUCTION REQUIREMENTS

The primary, basic requisites of any home now being built is a matter to which the ultimate owner need give but little attention. Foundations, heating, plumbing and wiring installations are closely inspected by the municipal authorities in almost every community and unless the approval is given the further construction of the house is prohibited.

The good builder, however, goes beyond this point and builds the foundation to carry far beyond the base requirements. He completes a heating system capable of fulfilling unusual demands, extra current taps for both lighting and wall plugs are provided, better pipes, drains and rough plumbing accessories are used; and throughout, the so-called rough work is capable of filling both the usual and unusual demands upon it.

It is on this basis that the Boston Evening American Home Builders Bureau selected the Arthur H. Whitcomb Company to complete the construction of a six-room Dutch Colonial house which is nearing completion on Brigham road in Waltham, just off the Post road at the Watertown line. This company has, during thirty five years, built homes of almost every conceivable type, small and large, single and two-family, and inspection was made of both, some of which had been sold and half a dozen which are awaiting purchasers. The equipment and workmanship, beyond local requirements were studied and found to be unusually fine. In many cases this important factor in permanent satisfaction is overlooked.

The concrete block foundation, framework, roof, shingles, lathing and plaster, rough plumbing, heating and wiring are now completed. The interior finish throughout will be in place by this week-end and the first coat of white paint has been applied. Readers interested in any of this equipment are cordially invited to inspect the work at any time, preferably on Saturdays and Sundays, when a representative is at the house all day. Three other houses in a like degree of completion are also open to inspection in addition to two very splendid completed homes, one of six and one of seven rooms. The public is also invited to see two double houses and two single houses on Water street, Medford. The Whitcomb organization maintains an office, and no obligation is incurred for advice and help on home-building and financing problems, in room 531, Old South Building, with hours from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. Without obligation our readers are invited to make use of this office for advice and assistance on all home-building and construction problems, or for arranging first or second mortgages.

Built for Utility Plus Appearance

Inspection of Homes Allowed During Building

Although the Warrendale Home will not be completed and furnished until about October 20th, prospective home builders and home buyers may inspect this house and a group of several model homes on Brigham Road, Waltham, at any time. Warrendale is a restricted district of single family homes situated just off the Boston Post Road, five minutes from Watertown Square, opp. Waltham Country Club.

LEGIONNAIRES LEAVE ROME

Rome, Sept. 30.—America's Europe-touring Legionnaires left the Italian capital on the return journey to Paris after a day passed in sight seeing and climaxed by a dinner given in their honor by Italy's veterans.

Italian officials and war heroes crowded the railroad station to give the Americans a real send-off. As the train pulled out, a military band played the "Star Spangled Banner."

In the morning, the Legionnaires and their families had visited the crack riding school of the Italian army, where cavalry officers staged a program of stunts for the visitors.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY EVENTS

Members of Smart Set Still Lingering in Oceanside and Country Estates

AS AUTUMN SLOWLY PAINTS THE COUNTRYSIDE IN GLOWING colors Society lingers in its favored demains—the North Shore and the South Shore and the hunting country found about Hamilton and Topsfield. Quite loath to miss one jot of this magic metamorphosis are the fashionables, even though luxurious town houses await their coming and the Season soon gets into swing. Down at Cohasset the Hugh Bancrofts, ensconced on their hillside, make a long season of it. Not the least interesting part of the large estate at "Deer Hill" are the stables, filled with high steppers of the constantly-ribbon-winning sort.

THE HANDSOME SHORE front estate at Manchester presided over by Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge is hospitably open for a season that commences in early Spring and continues to late Autumn. The Coolidge place possesses an unrivaled sea view as well as the sylvan seclusion all good North Shoreites consider so necessary to their Summer homes. The manor house rises in stately majesty over terraces and walled gardens, and the rugged rocks form several sheltered coves to give the scene the charm of variety.

MR. AND MRS. THEODORE FROTHINGHAM, JR., with their young son and little daughter may make their North Shore stay a lengthy one. Mrs. Frothingham's small daughter being many years distant from the debutante stage that lovely young matron is bending her energies (and they are not inconsiderable) to seeing that Miss Dorothea Frothingham's first Winter is brilliantly done.

MISS DOROTHEA FROTHINGHAM, a charming girl with a lovely voice, is sure to be an immediate success when she invades the social arena. For a year or more she has lived abroad with her parents, the Theodore Frothinghams, senior, going through the finishing process considered necessary to the successful bud. That this young girl will be guided into the paths that surely lead to membership in Vincent Club and Junior League is a foregone conclusion, with adoring relatives having an eye to her welfare.

TRAVELING IN EUROPE

Miss Susan Dette follows the usual procedure in, after the coming out year, going abroad for a season. She sailed with her mother, Mrs. William Dette, only a short time ago.

THE RICHARD T. CRANE place that sits atop its Ipswich hill like a feudal castle of old is slowly nearing completion. They call it "Castle Hill," a name most fitting for such a mag[illegible] place, one that covers a goodly [illegible] and dominates the entire [illegible]. Every sort of landscape lies before it, an infinite variety. A river at its side flows to the sea. Between it and the broad Atlantic stretches [illegible] of beach and dunes. [illegible] marshes give way to wood[illegible] and these in turn are [illegible] by the rolling Ipswich countryside.

AT INTERVALS THE CRANES have added to their Score [illegible] piece of land and [illegible] is a marvellously [illegible] property. Mr. Crane's [illegible] coming home [illegible] in advance of the family to oversee [illegible] Mr. Crane [illegible] of the former Miss [illegible] Patterson, now Mrs. Russell [illegible] Codman, Jr., and one of the stars of "The Miracle" [illegible] Crane's yacht, the "M[illegible]" [illegible] in honor of Miss Patterson's part in the spectacle.

OF COURSE THE MYOPIA SET that rides to hounds with much frequency could not be induced to leave the North Shore [illegible] and the frost has [illegible] from [illegible] the sod. The [illegible] hunting Ayers make a long season at their Hamilton place and over at "Brackenside" there are [illegible] and attractions sufficient to keep the Augustus P. [illegible] in residence through the entire Autumn.

LIKE THE CRANE ESTATE "Brackenside" has a magnificent manor house on a superb height that commands marvelous sunset views. And wonderful to relate, as it basks serenely in the sunshine there's an air of hoary, mellow picturesqueness about the place such as age gives, although it came into being from a rough wooded state only a few years ago. Last year some brilliant entertaining went on there for Miss Frances Goodwin, debutante, and this season there's another brilliant prospect in store for Miss Betty Barrell, bud.

"What Are You Doing with Your $5?"

"HELLO, George, where are you bound?"
"Just on my way to the bank."

"What? You're banking money? Why, we both work at the same place and earn the same pay, but none of mine ever gets within a mile of a bank. How do you do it?

"Every week I save $5. That's not hard. Almost any man can do that. Maybe you think it isn't much. But it's $5 every week, with no skips. And look here, Tom:

"A weekly deposit of $5, placed at 4% interest, compounded, will amount to $264.68 in one year. In 20 years—$7915.21! A mighty nice little sum for any man to have tucked away for his wife, the boy and himself. Of course, if a fellow can save $10 a week—or $15—so much the better."

"Say, George, where is that bank of yours? We're both on our way there now. Here's $5 I expected merely to spend. It's going to be my first deposit in a regular savings account."

DUD BELL SUPPLANTS TURNER

Veteran Harvard Center Will Not Start Game Against Vermont Tomorrow

Two surprises featured the naming of Coach Arnold Horween's starting Harvard lineup against Vermont in the Stadium tomorrow. The big shock is that Dudley Bell, center on the first eleven last year, will start at center in preference to [illegible] Turner, pivot on the last [illegible] eleven two years ago. Another late change has Bill [illegible] playing at end in place of Johnny Prior.

"I cannot say that this is the final lineup," said Horween this morning. "We still have many places in doubt and only after we [illegible] tonight will we be sure of the starting lineup. A tentative lineup [illegible] Strong and Lord at end, Captain [illegible] and Clark at tackle; Simonds [and] Parkinson at guard; Bell at center; Kelly, quarter; and Crosby, [illegible]naccia and Sam Burns, backs. [Wh]ich looks like the real lineup for tomorrow's game."

It seems that behind the walls of the practice field Bell and Turner have had a real battle for the pivot [job] all week. On past experience Turner has it all over his younger adversary. Turner sprained his [ank]le early this week and Bell's ability simultaneously came up like a rocket.

The first major casual at Harvard this season is Gardner Lewis, end [of] Team C, who suffered a compound fracture of the leg in scrimmage. He will be out for the season.

Johnny Prior from Malden has showed up better than any varsity [en]d this Fall but the coaches are bringing the junior along slowly and hence his perch on the bench at the starting whistle tomorrow. Prior will be in there before dusk falls and Vermont will see the former Malden star in his best form.

Vermont is due in Cambridge today and has been offered the use of the Stadium this afternoon.

TUFTS WORKING FOR LOWELL OPENING

Tufts varsity grid team opens its schedule Saturday afternoon against Lowell Textile at Tufts Oval. Balance marks the Sampson coached team this year and no single man is looked to for victory.

The school is confidently expecting that of the entire eleven. The line looks stronger than it has for a number of years with the average weight about 190 pounds, and with plenty of reserve material carrying the same weight.

Hanson and Fitzgerald, at tackle, are both seasoned veterans, and the latter will probably do most of the kicking in Saturday's tilt. Nelley, filling the guard position, came up from last year's Freshman squad and looks good.

Competition is keen for end berths with Capt. Bowker and Austin probable first choices. The backfield, although short of good substitute material, is fast and light and should give their opponents plenty of trouble.

Coach Sampson has scrimmaged his charges every day this week. His regulars ran at will through the yearling squad yesterday, scoring three touchdowns in fifteen minutes and not allowing the frosh a first down.

The probable lineup: Bowker, Austin (Goldman) ends; Hanson, Fitzgerald, tackles; Kelley, Soule, guards; Brehaut or Tobey centre; Marshall, Hingston, Kennedy, backs; Ellis, quarter.

Rivalry Renewed in Noble-Dedham Game

By JOE CASHMAN.

A gridiron rivalry of long standing will be resumed this afternoon when Noble and Greenough and Dedham High clash on the former's ground at Dedham.

Other stellar attractions on today's school football card are Milton Academy vs. Milton High, Boston Trade vs. Watertown and Braintree vs. Canton.

Five times in the past five years have Dedham and Noble and Greenough battled on the gridiron and the public school eleven has yet to lose a game to its private school rival, though twice it has been held even.

To take Coach Sutherland's word for it, Dedham's slate will still be clean after the result of today's game has been written into the records despite the fact that Noble and Greenough is reputed to be a smart, well-balanced eleven.

According to the Dedham mentor, his 1927 grid machine is one of the best that he has ever produced. If he is correct in his estimate, we can understand why he is so confident of the outcome of the clash this p. m. for Dedham has had some pretty sweet elevens since Sutherland took over the coaching job.

Dedham will start with three veterans, Captain Walter White, fullback; Alfred Twitchell, centre, and William Connors, end. Coach Sutherland has another regular named Bingham, a guard, but this lad is not in the best of physical condition and it is unlikely that he will see action.

There are many fine prospects in the squad of new material and the mentor feels sure that his green charges will work well with his trio of veterans.

The Milton High-Milton Academy engagement promises to be a thriller from beginning to end with the result in doubt until the final whistle sounds.

The private school youths usually emerge triumphant in this annual clash with their fellow townsmen from the public school, but the latter are much bigger than usual this year and may walk off with a victory.

Milton High presented one of the heaviest lines in schoolboy ranks in its opening game against Needham Saturday, which it captured. The forwards didn't work very well together, but Coach Yeaton can be counted upon to remedy this defect. The academy boys promise to have plenty of trouble gaining ground this afternoon.

Trade School opened its season in a most auspicious manner by [illegible]ishing off Middlesex last Saturday and is slightly favored to take Watertown into camp today.

The intown school, however, will find Watertown a much stiffer proposition than the Concord eleven, which had only a few days' practice before the opening game. Coach Ward, new mentor at Watertown, has had his squad out for a long while and his eleven is in [illegible] shape for today's tilt.

Nobody realizes this any better than Harry Tilton, Trade's mentor, and he has impressed the fact on his charges. Tilton admits his team looked formidable against Middlesex, but he will not let it entertain the notion that it is invincible until Watertown is taken into camp.

WOBURN VETS TO HOLD AMATEUR SHOW OCT. 4

Woburn Post, No. 543, V. F. W., will hold their first boxing tourney of the season Tuesday night, Oct. 4, at Lyceum Hall, Woburn, with the following classes: 112, 118, 126 and 147 pounds.

Entries close Monday, Oct. 3, with M. J. Kelley, 29 Chestnut street, Woburn, Mass.

Somerset Eleven Challenges

The Somerset A. A. would like to arrange a game with any fast amateur team in the State away from home on October 9. Call Joseph Bettencourt, Liberty 2500, between 2 and 4 p. m., or write 69 Raymond ave., Somerville, Mass.

HARRY ROBERTSON HAS OGLETHORPE TEAM BUSY

Oglethorpe University, Ga., Sept. 30.—Having put in a full week of hard training under the keen eye of Coach Harry Robertson, the Oglethorpe Petrels are rapidly approaching the scrimmage stage of their practice sessions. It is likely that the call to "shoulder pads and headgear" will be sounded before the end of the week.

Due to the fact that the Petrels are not opening their season until October 15, Coach Harry Robertson and "Nutty" Campbell, his assistant, did not report here until last Wednesday. Since that time the forty or more candidates for the Petrel eleven have had little if any rest.

PETE DE PAOLO AT ROCKINGHAM

Pete DePaolo and his teammate, Tony Guletta, have arrived at the Rockingham Speedway accompanied by a miniature army of mechanics and general helpers.

Pete's arrival was heralded as a sign of trouble by most of the drivers, for the Italian is known as a sure go-getter, when it comes to motor racing with the stakes high and competition keen.

However, the coming of DePaolo was welcome news to the boys, for wherever the former champion is to be found, there joy is sure to reign. Pete, always the life of any party, ready to play a prank on one of the gang, and equally ready to be the victim of someone's practical joke.

ENGLISH SOCCER TEAM AT NEW ENGLAND FAIR

Worcester, Sept. 30.—Lieutenant-Governor Frank G. Allen, representing Governor Fuller, members of the Worcestershire, England soccer team and officials of the Worcester county sportsmanship brotherhood and the Worcestershire Sports fellowship and members and members of Governor's Council were guests of honor at the New England fair.

They were given a dinner in the big dining hall adjoining the agricultural building.

PROVIDENCE COLLEGE FIVE TO PLAY BROWN

Providence, R. I., Sept. 30 (A. P.).—A 16-game basketball list, which includes but two home games, one being with Brown University, has been announced by Graduate Manager John E. Farrell for the Providence College quintet.

The game with Brown will be the first ever played between the two colleges in that sport.

TERRIS TAKES LICKING FROM MARTINEZ

New York, Sept. 30.—Sid Terris, leading contender for the lightweight crown, went out of his class to battle Hilario Martinez, Spanish welterweight, and in so doing took a bad beating.

The Spaniard was awarded the decision after ten fast rounds at the Queensboro Stadium.

Nurmi Suspended By Finnish A. A.

New York, Sept. 29 (A. P.).—Paavo Nurmi, famous Finnish runner, is at odds with his country's athletic authorities, according to word received here, and virtually under suspension because of his recent refusal to run at the international meet at Stockholm between Finland and Sweden.

The first punitive measure reported is refusal of a permit for Nurmi to participate in meets this Fall at Paris and other continental cities.

GUY OZARK PROVIDES SURPRISE AT LEXINGTON

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 30.—The nine days' session of the trots ended here with a four-race program the feature of which was the $4,000 free-for-all trot.

Only a trio started, and Guy Ozark, winner of the Walnut Hall Cup here last year, beat the $50 to $30 favorite Aileen Guy, setting the pace all the way in both heats.

RUTH MOST POPULAR OF ALL SPORT HEROES

GEORGE HERMAN RUTH, cudgelling himself up even with his home run record, won a cheer from every sport fan in the country. There never was a more popular hero in the history of sport in this far-flung land. That goes for Dempsey and John L. and Ty Cobb and everybody else.

Nick Flatley

When the news percolated that the Babe had cracked out his fifty-eighth, everybody, from the managing editor down to the office boy, began to chatter and buzz and watch the wire. And when he hit his fifty-ninth—the boys began to gargle their throats.

The phone started to ring.

"Did the Babe get another?" was the unanimous question.

The world is rooting wildly for young Mister Ruth to establish a new record, and that dynamic individual will probably respond He has the habit of making good with the public, the main reason that he has such a large and enthusiastic public.

Babe Ruth, equalling that record made six years ago, proved himself a real superman. He has been knocking around baseball for a matter of fifteen years. He started out handicapped with a wild and somewhat roisterous disposition, and a trick knee that used to fold up on him, even when he was a kid.

Yet here he is, back better than ever, after hundreds of experts and authorities have been predicting his explosion and retirement for something like ten years. The Babe is no Sunday school model in these days of his athletic middle age. He wouldn't be popular if he was.

He has, however, the love of the game and the flaming desire to excel far beyond any other competitor sport has known, possibly excepting Cobb. Ruth will have to stop some time, of course. But when he comes along at the age of 33, after fifteen years of hectic diamond strife to have a real shot at a new record, it must be admitted that his finish isn't immediately in sight.

This final surge of the Bam will not put any particular joy in the hearts of the Pirates as they prepare for the world series The big boy nearly wrecked the Cards a year ago with his prodigious swats. He's showing the way for a better team this Fall

Ruth will make the coming world series the most colorful of them all. He will loom bigger than all the rest of the works. And he should. He has the stuff and the color to make each showing a solo performance.

HOME RUN RECORDS ARE BROKEN EVERY NIGHT BY THE VISITORS TO THE EVENING CLUBS.

"I'd like to make the big leagues,"
The rookie pitcher said.
"But I'm afraid that if I did
This Ruth would knock me dead."

BOB O'FARRELL DID WONDERFUL JOB WITH CARDS

WHEN the baseball laurels are distributed for the season, a hefty bunch should be draped around the sun-burned brow of Robert O'Farrell, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals. That team has just fallen out of the pennant chase, apparently, but the fact that it remained in until the last few days is a wonderful tribute to the personal genius of Robert.

He took over the team under handicaps that would have curdled the heart of a less courageous individual. Rogers Hornsby had established himself a demi-god in St. Louis. He won the first pennant that city ever knew, and then steered the Cards on to World Series glory.

When Rogers was canned, the village turned against the team. And feeling is real and earnest out that way. The new manager was a tagged goat before he had any chance to show. The Cards bogged down in early season, and Bob was panned and jeered.

He stuck to his job, though, and brought the team back. The boys were beginning to cheer for him.

Then Tommy Thevenow broke an ankle. Tommy was the reason the Cards won in '26. He was a great shortstop, who made a fine team out of a staggering aggregation. When he passed out, almost any manager would have tossed up the sponge.

Mister O'Farrell did not quit, though. He stuck to his job, drove his team into the race and nearly collected. He took over a tough job with a grin, and more than made good, despite more trouble than a new traffic cop causes.

He certainly was the most valuable something or other of the 1927 campaign.

BUGGS CAN WIN FLAG TODAY

New York, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Pittsburgh can clinch the pennant by defeating the Reds in Cincinnati today. Even if the Pirates lose all their three remaining games, they will get no worse than a tie if the Cardinals and Giants make a clean sweep in their two and three games, respectively.

The Cardinals passed out of the picture when they lost to the Reds yesterday, 3 to 2, while the Pirates and Giants were idle.

With their pennant hopes practically ruined, the Cardinals must now travel at a fast pace to ward off the rush of the Giants. New York can tie the Red Birds for second place by beating Brooklyn today, as St. Louis does not play. The standing:

CURTAIN RISES ON FOOTBALL

Harvard, Boston College and Tufts Play Opening Games Tomorrow

By STED CHANDLER

Three local football teams open their season in Greater Boston tomorrow, while the fourth outfit, with one game already behind it, marks time for another week. Harvard plays Vermont; Boston College entertains a southern visitor, Duke University of North Carolina; and Tufts opens against Lowell Textile. Boston University, however, is inactive.

Interest centres [illegible] on Boston College and Harvard [illegible] especially [illegible] first showing as [illegible] the B[illegible] Major [illegible] Harvard [illegible] rather an unknown [illegible] year, is not expected to have much trouble with Vermont, a [illegible] took [illegible] week.

HARVARD MAY OPEN UP.

In spite of [illegible] pressed [illegible] that Harvard [illegible] during [illegible] to be [illegible] tends [illegible] style of [illegible] the Vermont game will be the first test of Harvard's [illegible]

It is [illegible] that the forward passing [illegible] indulged in, the big games are no times to inaugurate it. The method of offense is still in its infancy and will stand a deal of experimentation before [illegible] Therefore [illegible] Harvard for the next [illegible] weeks or so should reveal a number of its possibilities and handicaps.

Coach Arthur Sampson of Tufts likes his first string men, but is none too satisfied over his replacements. Th[illegible] though not considering defeat at the hands of Lowell Textile, he is working toward the future in an effort to keep his varsity [illegible] standard. "One of my regulars injured," he said "and I'm going to be out of luck."

OTHER GOOD GAMES.

Other New England teams in action tomorrow will be Bates vs. M. A. C. at Lewiston; Brown vs. Albright at Providence; Colby vs. New Hampshire at Waterville; Dartmouth vs. Hobart at Hanover; Holy Cross vs. St. John's at Worcester; Maine vs. Rhode Island at Orono; Amherst vs. Princeton at Princeton; Norwich vs. R. P. I. at Troy; Springfield vs. Providence at Springfield; Wesleyan vs. Connecticut Aggies at Middletown; Williams vs. Middlebury at Williamstown and Yale vs. Bowdoin at New Haven.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"I'M batting for Jack Conway today," chirped Mr. Boston as he borrowed one of Fred Lane's cigarettes. "You see, Jack thought it was going to be cold up at Braves Field and so kidded me into covering the Argonne Club's fights for him. The joke was on Jack, as I saw as much scrapping as Tunney and Dempsey dished up on the shores of Lake Michigan a week ago.

"I always wanted to sit in at one of Eddie Mack's bargain attractions [illegible] everybody I have met this Summer has been rooting about these 50-50 shows. So I wanted to get a close-up of the action from the press row.

"As I walked into the baseball orchard, I spent considerable time lamping the cash customers. They didn't look like the birds I have been seeing at boxing shows for these many years. The 50-cent racket has developed a brand new crop of fans. They get pop-eyed with excitement as soon as they get within a couple of hundred yards of the ring.

"They had a band there and it made my blood tingle. It was quite a sight to see the big mob stand up and un[illegible] as the band played the Star Spangled Banner.

"I MUST get down to the business of reporting the show or Conway will think that as a boxing expert I'm a fine tourist. So I'll tell [illegible] about this Holy Moses who fought Spike Hennessey in a six round bout which was the final tussle on the card. This Holy Moses person is supposed to have a right hand which is sure poison. Maybe it [illegible] but what good is a right hand if the party of the second part won't [illegible]

"Hennessey was wise enough to keep at close quarters where he al[illegible] Holy Moses back to Harlem. [illegible] he belted [illegible] Just as Referee [illegible] was near[illegible] Holy Moses rolled under the lower rope and reported for action. If Holy Moses couldn't roll so well, he would have been counted out. The verdict went to Spike.

"THERE was another bout between a couple of guys with concrete [illegible] names of Sid Barbarian, billed as some kind of a [illegible] from Detroit and Johnny Ceccoli of Scranton. These two [illegible] unless somebody is bouncing a [illegible] block. [illegible] as they slugged away like a couple [illegible] Winter's rations.

"In the [illegible] Ceccoli apparently felt he was not stopping [illegible] called upon the Barbarian person to 'come on and fight.' As Barbarian only clouted him 99 times during the rest of the round, the Scranton citizen again demanded action in the tenth frame. He was hit 987 times during this chapter, but when the gong sounded he [illegible] the customers. He wanted to take the boys into the dressing room and show them a few [illegible] but Eddie Mack wouldn't allow him to do so. He feared there wouldn't be room for all of the 50-cent customers.

"Joe Grimm would have been peeved if he had seen Ceccoli and Barbarian do the cave man stuff. Joe has always felt that he should have exclusive rights to taking them on the chin.

"THERE was also a bout between Billy Algers of Pheonix, Ariz., and [illegible] Hull of North Dakota and Broadway. It was won by Algers who was so unkind as to drop Hull to the canvas in the sixth and [illegible] The final knockdown was scored just before the bell and [illegible] victory a certainty.

"[illegible] bout was supposed to be between George Courtney of New York and Wop Mancini of Dorchester. I say 'supposed' because [illegible] Holy Moses person carried off the honors although he didn't [illegible] Courtney person is one of the best bets in the [illegible] Jack Sharkey [illegible] even at a 50-cent show and so gave the New Yorker the honors.

"Paddy Mullins has Courtney. Paddy is one of the real fellows in the [illegible] As manager of Mike O'Dowd and Harry Wills, he has been very much in the limelight. He should take Courtney a long ways [illegible]

"I PRESUME somebody would squawk if I didn't give mention to the [illegible] boys. Tommy Mack of South Boston won the decision over Jack Sullivan of Charlestown in four rounds, Ray Cuskay of Chelsea [illegible] Henry Al[illegible] of Worcester in four chapters, Frankie Moore of the [illegible] Tony Santelli of Worcester in four heats, while Speedy [illegible] of the Walk Miller stable outgalloped Barney Sweeney of Providence in four sessions.

"Gene Buckley, the backbone of the boxing game in Massachusetts, and Dane Lane were there to see that everything was legal and proper. I find that boxing has become quite an institution in the old Bay State. And this 50-cent racket is a wow."

BOXING FANS KNOW FREEMAN

Tommy Freeman, of Hot Springs, Ark., hailed as the outstanding contender for the world's welterweight crown following his brilliant victory over Joe Simonich of Butte, Mont., at Braves Field last June for the Crosscup-Pishon Post, will return to the Hub for a bout that will either make him or break him as far as the welterweight championship is concerned.

Freeman comes to Boston October 7 to clash with Johnny Indrisano of East Boston in the gem of welterweight matches, a fight that looms up as a near title event, a battle that is sure to see the heavy punching and an event which is sure to be witnessed by one of the greatest crowds that ever witnessed an indoor show in Boston.

Following his stunning victory over Champion Joe Dundee of Baltimore here, Indrisano has simply whirled through space until today he is one of the greatest welterweight cards in the game. In spite of the fact that lucrative offers poured in following his victory over Dundee, Indrisano refused to accept any of them until he had first made good for Eddie Mack. Following his victory, he stated that he was ready to meet any title contender in the game and he has made good his promise by agreeing to meet Freeman, the most wicked hitter among the 147 pounds boys in the game.

School Notes

For the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, South Boston defeated High School of Commerce on the gridiron at Billings Field, West Roxbury, Thursday. Scoring a touchdown in both the first and fourth periods, the Peninsula eleven walked off with a 12 to 0 verdict over the intown school.

Commerce has one of the biggest elevens ever to represent the school but when Coach "Doc" Fleming said that his squad was "green" he didn't tell the half of it. Not one on the players has ever had varsity experience and the popular mentor has a big task on his hands to turn out a winning eleven this season. When these Commerce athletes learn the game however, watch out. The starting eleven looked bigger than some college teams we have seen.

* * *

South Boston, on the other hand, is unusually light, but there are four or five classy veterans in the lineup and the team as a whole knows its onions.

Coach Steve White's Peninsula team is a small edition of Brown's famous "iron men" of last season. Not one substitution was made in the lineup until the last two minutes of the game when one back and an end were replaced and neither substitution was necessary.

Barry and Curran, Southie's wings looked very good and Captain "Matty" Connolly played his usual first class game at guard and kept his mates on their toes all the time.

The shining light on the South Boston team, as far as the large gallery was concerned, was the 112-pound quarterback, Sferrazza. His receiving and running back of punts was marvelous for a boy of his size and he showed excellent judgment in his selection of plays throughout the game.

* * *

Quarterback Haney, who acted as captain of the Commerce eleven, and Cowing, a halfback, were the outstanding Blue and Grey performers but their good work went for naught because of the inexperience of their mates.

Coach Tom Hines has shifted his Brookline High lineup considerably in preparation for the visit of the Wealthy Towners to Brockton tomorrow. The two leading candidates for the quarterback job were injured in scrimmages this week, and the Brookline mentor doesn't know yet just what he will do about a signal caller.

* * *

Northampton High will take on the Mass. Aggie freshmen at Springfield this afternoon.

FINNEGAN TO MEET SACCO

After angling for two months for the most "natural" match in Boston fistic circles since the days of the reign of Eddie Murphy of South Boston, Eddie Mack, matchmaker of the Argonne Club, has struck a virgin vein by clinching a great match.

Dick "Honeyboy" Finnegan of Dorchester, most recent contender for the lightweight throne, will clash with Jimmy Sacco of East Boston who has not met defeat since he returned from his successful invasion of the Pacific Coast.

And these boys will battle for the lightweight championship of New England. Checks for $[illegible] to bind the weight agreement of 135 pounds were posted yesterday and this bout is expected to prove one of the most thrilling fistic bouts in the history of this city.

Finnegan and Sacco will clash on the night of October 14, at Mechanics Building in the feature bout for the Argonne A. A. It will be the second [illegible] show of the season.

Waiting for you in Maine

This fall get away to the big woods of Maine and bring home your deer. There's good sport in Maine for the duck hunter, too. And partridge are plentiful in most sections.

You owe yourself a hunting trip in the clear, crisp air of Maine before starting the long year's work ahead. There's golf, too, and motoring is at its best in the flaming autumn foliage. Take a fall vacation in Maine. Let us help you plan.

DEFENSE IS BIG FACTOR

Pirates and Yankees Have Shown Very Tight Baseball All This Season

By NICK FLATLEY

Defensive errors have decided the last two World Series.

Roger Peck had a fluttery spasm in 1925, and the Pittsburgh Pirates thereby licked the Washington Senators.

Bob Meusel missed a fly ball in the crucial game between the Yanks and Cards a year ago, and so the title, as baseball's biggest money prize is called, went to St. Louis.

Consequently it is fairly easy to deduce that defense plays its large part in these golden classics. A team that is practically 100 per cent on the defense will almost invariably lick an outfit that is wobbly and slow in the fielding end, no matter what the other qualifications.

Two great defensive collections meet when the Yankees and the Pirates collide next week. Look them over man for man and you find that they're closer than a couple of storybook Scotchmen.

There's mighty little to choose, and the edge which the Pirates have, is thinner than a cigarette paper. Both clubs have been perfectly seasoned for the impending engagement, the Yanks by a two parade along the pennant trail; the Pirates in the various crises of one of the wildest races in all large league history.

STARTING with the outfield, and presuming that Babe Ruth plays left, the well known Sultan has it all over Clyde Barnhart. The Bam can cover more ground, has a surer pair of fists, the surest there are, and can throw the ball like a bullet to any old base. Ruth, a great hitter, is also a great outfielder, while Barnhart is by no means a star.

Things are much closer in center. Here little Lloyd Waner, playing his first big league year, has a slight advantage over Combs because he can throw a little better. That's all, though. In other respects, the pair are as alike as two peas—fast, real ball hawks who kill off base hits with daily nonchalance.

The situation in right is much the same. Here the Pirate Paul Waner, rates slightly above Bob Meusel, but very slightly. Paul a bit more daring. He has remarkable speed and is one of the most finished outfielders in the game. Meusel is not colorful, but he can go get them, and has the finest arm in the league.

BABE RUTH'S wide superiority just about balances the super[illegible]ence of the remarkable Waner boys and rating the outfields is just about a case of tossing a coin and taking your choice. With Cuyler in there, the Pirates would look much stronger, but as Donie Bush benched him, and then proceeded to go on for a pennant, that mixup can hardly enter series discussion.

The infields are just about a fifty-fifty proposition, also. Traynor and Wright at short and third, outclass Koenig and Dugan, while Lazzeri and Gehrig, on the other side of the diamond, shape up better in a fielding way than Grantham and Harris.

Traynor is one of the greatest infielders of modern baseball, the best third baseman who has come along since Jimmy Collins. There's no comparison now between him and the aging Dugan, although Joseph is still smart and knows all the tricks. Koenig has been a great ball player, but he's not quite as wide a ranger as Wright. Both are fine shortstops, with a tendency to inject an error every now and then.

Tony Lazzeri at second is a real fielding star. He does everything easily and naturally and gets to hits that look impossible to handle with no show of effort. Grantham is a good fielder, and fast, but not at all as steady or brilliant as his rival.

Gehrig isn't the greatest first baseman in the world in a thinking way, but mechanically he's mighty good, faster and more shifty than Joe Harris. Joseph is keener, but he hasn't the physical equipment of the Columbia hero.

THUSLY we convince ourself that in the matter of cutting off hits and snuffing runs, the Pirate and Yankee teams are on a par, both in the infield and outfield. The balance of fielding power would seem to rest with the catchers.

And here the Pirates have the call. To our way of thinking, the Pittsburgh pair, Earl Smith and Johnny Gooch, are better backstops than Benny Bengough or Pat Collins of the Huggins gang. Gooch is a finished performer in the receiving role and Smith while awkward and uncouth, has a good arm.

HE CAN TOSS THEM

WILSON IS GOOD FOR 14 POINTS
And if this is true Bob Wilson, the Purdue University passer, shown in this picture, is likely to cause Harvard some trouble in the Stadium a week from tomorrow.

JOHNSON RAPS LANDIS AND WHITE SOX

Chicago, Sept. 30 (A. P.)—Ban Johnson, who has resigned as president of the American League, issued a statement today criticising the attitude of the Chicago White Sox and the office of Commissioner of Baseball Landis.

Johnson said he wished to issue this statement in fairness to his Association's club owners.

"As a matter of simply justice to them in view of certain statements to the contrary appearing in the press, it should be said that seven of the eight club owners of the American League have continued to function with the league headquarters during the period between their president's tender of his resignation early in July and the taking effect of that resignation as was agreed upon.

"The only club that has given evidence of deliberate attempt to embarrass the league, as conducted from headquarters, has been the Chicago organization, which might have been expected to grasp at such an opportunity since it has been almost continuously out of step with the majority of the league for a period of years.

"The childish spite and rebellion on the part of the Chicago club has been matched, even outdone, by petty actions of the office of the commissioner of baseball. That office, not the American League headquarters, has ceased to function insofar as conduct of mutual relations as provided for in their agreement are concerned, in a manner that would be amazing, were it not what might be expected of one of the mental quirks of the commissioner himself.

"But let it be repeated, seven clubs of the eight in the league have had the good common sense and business intelligence to maintain their ordinary relations with their presidential office realizing, it seems, that their own interests demanded this much as having been prompted by a spirit of fair sportsmanship, whatever differences of policy may have led to the impending severance of relations of so many years."

President Johnson would add nothing to the statement, saying that it spoke for itself. He was not certain as to the date of his retirement, which depends, he said, on how long it takes him to wind up the league's business.

AL MELLO FIT TO WIN TITLE

Al Mello, Lowell's young welterweight, is in top form for his coming battle with Meyer Cohen for the New England welterweight championship, to be held at the Arena Monday night under the direction of the Suffolk A. A.

Fighting regularly, training always, young Mello has regained the sensational form that catapulted him to the top in a few hurried steps. He has had enough experience to send him against any welterweight in the land on even terms, and on Monday night, he will be a slight favorite to snatch the New England welterweight crown from the brow of Cohen.

The bout will head a card of 50 rounds. The ten-round semi-final for the New England middleweight championship, will bring together Bob Lowrie, veteran Scot, and Danny Sears, hard-punching East Boston boy. An eight-rounder is being made by Tom Goodwin, and in three six-rounders the following boxers will be paired: Charlie Donovan, Dorchester, vs. Eddie Davis, South End; Phil Goldstein, New York, vs. Johnny Moore, North End; Joe Barlow, Roxbury, vs. Joe Costello, South End. The opening four-rounder will be between Bernard Barde of Dartmouth and Ray Cuskey of Chelsea.

Babe Will Have to Hit 'Em Hard Here

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 30 (A. P.).—There will be no "trick" home runs scored in that part of the World Series played on Forbes Field, the Pirates home ground, if any of the series is played there at all.

The field's seating capacity is 36,000. That will be augmented by the erection of 4,000 bleacher seats erected outside the field but above the level of the left field fence, Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburgh Club, announced.

The playing field, one of the largest in the major leagues, will be left untouched, he said. Permission to erect the new seats was granted by the city yesterday.

55 POLO PONIES BURNED TO DEATH AT DAYTON

Dayton, O., Sept. 30 (I.N.S.)—Fifty-five polo ponies and fine saddle horses were burned to death in a fire tonight thought to have been caused by a short circuit which destroyed the stables of the Dayton Country Club, near here, today. Only fifteen animals were saved, and the loss, including the buildings and equipment, is expected to reach $300,000.

FOOTBALL

by Major Frank Cavanaugh

(Copyright, 1927, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

IN my preceding article, I told something of the trials and tribulations of the players, coaches and football public, due to the meddling of the central board. The changes in the rules are even more deplorable when it is remembered that practically every authority on football in this country agreed that the game as played in 1924, 1925 and 1926 was practically perfect.

The few exceptions taken to the rules during those years, were concerning minor details, as, for instance, a more clearly defined stop before the ball was put in play, i. e. shift legislation, or the place which the point after touchdown should be scored from.

The rules, as promulgated by the Central Board for the year 1927, have certainly modified the game as it was played during the preceding three years. Whether for better or for worse is a matter of opinion.

To my mind, these changes seem to show the way the wind is blowing. I mean, that I think that the Central Board, in its latest set of rules, shows its hand or at least the hand of the mysterious persons who are keeping it in power. They are not satisfied with American football! They want to change it! Why?

THE new rule on the lateral pass, the placing of the goal posts ten yards behind the goal line, and the calling of a fumbled punt a dead ball, all show a definite trend toward a different game. The shape of the field has been changed by this new placing of the goal posts so as "to avoid possible injuries and interference with the play, also to make the try-for-point after touchdown more difficult."

Well, maybe. In passing, I might say that for quite some time they have been tampering with the point after touchdown, and have succeeded only in bringing goal kickers up to such proficiency that they miss but one or two a year.

However, in these changes I think the Rules Committee intended much more than to simply curb the goal kicker. They also must have intended other things than simply preventing injuries.

IT is argued that the game may be speeded up by the new rules. Well it may be, but it will be at the expense of its distinctive character. They will rob football of the very things that have made it the great American game that it is so that some people in New England will obtain what they have wanted for a long time—an international football match.

To do this, the game of either of the English college or the American colleges, would have to be changed so as to insure real contests. The English game is, to put it [illegible] pretty well rooted in English life and customs. Therefore [illegible] is just change the American game.

I suppose we ought to be thankful that they are going about revising our game gradually, therefore giving us a warning. Maybe they want to give the rest of the schools a chance to take up cricket or ping-pong, for which consideration I duly thank them.

TO those not very well acquainted with the workings and machinations of the rules committee, it would seem that any efforts toward revising as successful a game as football, could be rather easily nipped in the bud, by coaches, or officials.

Remember, however, that neither the Coaches' Association nor the officials elect members to the rules committee. True enough, a few of both are on it, but they owe their appointment to selection by members already seated on the board. Any argument or rebellion by members is followed by dismissal or stern disapproval.

To me, the game seems headed along that way if those behind that movement can get away with it. Their chances for success are considerably enhanced by having the rules committee under their thumb.

The hope for the future of the American game lies in the hands of the Middle-West Conference and the Far West Conference. The "Big Ten" threw down the lateral pass rule. It has been partially changed. A few of the more independent Eastern coaches have flung down the gauntlet and attacked the new rules, particularly the fumbled punt ruling.

There is lots to hope, but also some danger.

There's magic in the words—

A good cup of coffee! There's magic in the very words! Steaming, fragrant coffee, richly creamed to mellow deliciousness, is one of the big joys in life.

But bottled cream certainly is expensive. Lots of families think they must get along without cream—and every cup of coffee they drink brings real disappointment.

Don't be disappointed! It isn't necessary—even when economy must be carefully considered. For Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk will cream and sugar your coffee to perfection—give it the rich, heavy, velvety body, the golden color and smooth, mellow flavor you long for—at one-half the cost of separate cream and sugar!

It's true! Millions of delicious cups of coffee testify to it every morning. Yours will tell the same pleasant story tomorrow morning—if you buy Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk today!

Here's the secret: Standard Milk is a smooth, heavy blend of pure, fresh, full-cream country milk (from which most of the water has been removed) and finest sugar. Removing the water gives more than double richness. Blending in the sugar gives the smoothness and body you find in heavy cream . . . and makes the flavor more tempting.

Get this milk today from your grocer. Not only for finer coffee—but for finer cooking, as well. Whenever a recipe calls for milk and sugar, Standard Milk is the milk to use. It gives extra richness, smoothness, creaminess. Keep it on hand . . . There's no waste to it! It keeps fresh, pure and rich for days after the can is opened—even without ice.

LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON (Authorized by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer

Before Edison began his experiments in the moving picture field several attempts were made to produce "motion" pictures with ordinary cameras. The most [illegible] of these was made by Edward Muybridge, in 1878. He set up several cameras on the rail of a trotting track. These were "snapped" by the horse striking strings.

In 1887 the idea occurred to Edison that he could make an instrument that would do for the eye what the phonograph did for the ear. In his mind he pictured the possibilities of combining both instruments so that singers and musicians long since dead could be "seen" and heard at the same time all over the world.

In the earliest attempts to make real moving pictures, using one camera and many negatives instead of one negative to each camera, the photographs were arranged in a spiral on a cylinder. This cylinder was about the size of the wax cylinder phonograph record of that time. Edison is shown here experimenting with one.

While Edison was experimenting with his moving pictures the film negative with which we are all familiar today, was being developed. Edison saw in this the solution of his problem. It was a very light body of tough material on which thousands of photographs could be made at a rapid rate. (Continued Tomorrow.)

To be present at the golden wedding of her son was the unusual distinction enjoyed by Mrs. Mar[illegible] Stone, mother of Clarence Stone, of Royalston, Mass. Of all the happy throng which visited the Stones during the day of celebration none took greater pleasure in recounting the memories of years ago than Mr. Stone's mother, who is ninety-six years old.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: For several years I have read your interesting column and have learned many good points pertaining to etiquette, but it is necessary that I come to you at this time for some help.

I have a brother [illegible] years old and I am twenty [illegible]. Our parents have been dead since we were very young. He comes to me for [illegible] regarding business and [illegible] and now he is going with a young lady whose [illegible] for me to make. [illegible] I haven't [illegible] entertain her. I am going to take the two to a restaurant [illegible] the country for dinner. Now, Mrs. Beeckman, would it be proper for me to invite a young man to this dinner with whom I have been out only twice? (Please [illegible] I am going to pay for the dinner.) [illegible] to do because I am quite sure [illegible] would come with us if I [illegible] him. Thank you! BIG SISTER.

AND bless your heart, what a glorious big sister you are! Your brother is fortunate—and apparently he knows it, for he expresses his good fortune by sharing confidences with you.

Yes, I think that it would be a charming thing for you to plan to have this dinner with the friend of your brother, your brother, and your "best." A foursome would probably be more fun and easier for all concerned. If you like the young man of whom you write, there is no reason why you should not invite him to your party, even though you have been out with him so few times.

Could you [illegible] to have your party [illegible] where you could order it and pay for it before the party? This is [illegible] an easy way to do when you are entertaining in this [illegible]—[illegible] of the check at the end of the party, to "finance" [illegible] after the party. If the [illegible] is too far in the country to [illegible] you might telephone [illegible] inquiring [illegible] the dinner will be, and [illegible] before the dinner [illegible] you could possibly talk [illegible] with the head waiter, fee him, give him all your orders, and [illegible] it would please your [illegible] I am sure—Big [illegible] her in his [illegible] gracious [illegible] and would make it non-[illegible] all around.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Kindly advise me if it is proper for me to have a married [illegible] at my wedding. I have been told that it is not proper to have married attendants, but I have noticed at some very proper weddings that it is being done.

2. Also advise if it is necessary to have a [illegible] if I already have a matron of honor.

3. Is it proper for groom to wear a Tuxedo for an afternoon wedding? MAY B.

INDEED, it is quite correct to have a married woman as an attendant at a wedding. Nowadays in choosing their attendants brides and grooms [illegible] between married people and unmarried people. And why should they? It makes no difference so long as they are such close and devoted friends that they want to have them [illegible] as their attendants. Now one often sees weddings in which all the attendants are married. There is really only one suggestion that is made concerning this. It is considered better form if the bride's bridesmaids are all married for her to have a matron of honor instead of a maid of honor. But even this is not a "rule."

2. No. You may have both, but it is not necessary, nor is it so usual as to have only one.

3. No. The Tuxedo suit is informal evening attire and is not correct, even for a formal wedding before 6:30 or 7 in the evening. For a formal wedding in the evening the groom wears full dress, not Tuxedo. For a formal afternoon wedding he wears the cutaway coat and dark striped trousers.

"You Said It, Marceline"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

If a man gets "STUCK" in A business CONVERSATION,
Or wants a minute to THINK, and does NOT Want his opponent to KNOW,
He very often takes out
A CIGAR and laboriously
LIGHTS it.
If he happens to
NEED a couple of MINUTES
The cigar, of course,
Becomes TROUBLESOME, and Demands CONCENTRATION.
But finally he gets it
GOING and, leaning back,
Will remark CASUALLY:
"You were saying . . . . . ."
This is what a big BUSINESS man calls STRATEGY
But many an eighteen-
Year-old STENOGRAPHER, on Hearing the PAUSE, looks up
And turns her PRETTY
Soft eyes full upon him
As she THINKS: "The poor
BOOB, doesn't he know yet
That they ALL do it.
And that he is only
GIVING the other
Man time to get his NUMBER?" And she BOWS
Her marcelled head in PITY.

Household Hints

To keep dishcloths fresh wash them frequently in warm soapy water to which a little borax has been added and dry in the open air. If you use a mop for washing up treat in the same way.

Add a few drops of glycerine to the water when washing delicate lingerie. This gives the water a delightful softness and helps to make the articles beautifully clean.

trained. Beautiful animals, admirably kept; they waste nothing in France.

Here in rich America you ride miles through unending fields of corn or grain, pass great herds of heavy steers, deep in grass, and tens of thousands of acres not used.

In France they use every foot of ground, waste nothing, not food or human labor; men and women work long hours, work hard with patience.

The peasants' houses are beautiful and old, their animals well cared for. Along the coast of Brittany and the Vendee, men and women and children work side by side. Men repair, at low tide, their fish nets, colored light blue. The fishermen say, "Fish like color." On the flat lands you see little mounds of salt taken from the ocean by imprisoning waters in shallow pools for evaporation.

Once "La Gabelle," a heavy tax on salt, dressed the mistresses of French kings and made life easy for the three lucky classes—royalty, clergy and nobility. It was death to the peasant to escape "La Gabelle" by taking his salt from the ocean.

Conditions are better now. The kings are sleeping in St. Denis, the few whose bones were not scattered during the Revolution. There are more schools than chateaux, more public libraries than gallows. The peasant is no longer forbidden to kill animals that ate his crops because lords and ladies wanted the pleasure of riding over those crops to kill the animals themselves.

But in every French family there is mourning. Each earnest, hard faced French woman tells you how many sons, or brothers she had "left."

War was an exciting episode for us. It was almost death for France. Many Americans would rather pay a few more dollars in taxes than see France's recovery checked by too hard pressure for payments.

The French of the eighteenth century educated Jefferson, Franklin and other useful Americans. That was worth [illegible] thing.

Fashion Fads

Turning Over a New Leaf is quite the thing for costume jewelry fashions, as leaf motifs are considered extremely smart. One of the most unique new necklaces is a chain of gold maple leaves in choker length.

Casting Aside—all idea of balance, dress, coat and millinery fashions all sponsor the side effect in trimming. Side drapes on frocks, side closings on coats and side trimmings on hats definitely accent a one-sided fashion argument.

"Good to the last drop"

Ready to drop by noontime

SHE seemed to stay tired. Dragging through the hours—her lightest task too heavy. . . . What was the matter? Why, she used to be full of life and energy! What trick of fate had stolen her health? Had sapped her strength and set her nerves on edge?

Constipation takes awful toll from thousands of men and women. It thieves vitality. It wrecks energy. It dulls the heart and drives the body to pain. It destroys beauty and health itself, and often leads to serious disease. Yet it can be so easily prevented—so surely relieved! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation—safely and promptly. To prevent this common curse ever starting its [illegible]

ALL-BRAN vs. part-bran

It has "bulk" that relieves constipation. ALL-BRAN is all bulk. This bulk absorbs moisture and carries it throughout the intestines, at the same time gently distending them — purifying, removing poisonous wastes.

How different from part-bran products—in which the quantity of bulk is so small that there is seldom enough to be effective. That is why doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. Because it is 100% bran.

Beware of drugs!

Contrast healthful ALL-BRAN with habit-forming pills and drugs, which often become useless unless the dose is constantly increased! ALL-BRAN is delicious with milk or cream. And add fruits or honey for an extra treat. Let it soak in the milk for a few moments to bring out all its rich, nutty flavor. Serve it with other cereals. In soups. Try the recipes on every package. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal.

Don't risk a part-bran substitute. Insist on genuine Kellogg's—the original ALL-BRAN. Sold by all grocers. Served at hotels, restaurants, cafeterias—on dining-cars. Made by the Kellogg Company in Battle Creek, Mich. Write for free "Treatise on Constipation."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

Becky

by Rayner Seelig

Estabrook, Amazed, Found Himself on His Knees Before Her

Estabrook found himself on his knees.

Their arms about each other, they sat clasped closely.

Dan Scarlett wrote Becky that he was going away.

A Real Drama of Intrigue in Boston Theatrical Life After Curtain

CHAPTER 17.

SO, all unconscious of the scene that Dan Scarlett was enacting in another part of the city, Becky and Estabrook faced each other in Becky's dingy bedroom.

There was a little silence following Estabrook's remark, which Becky took up by saying plaintively "I should think you'd a been taught to wait until you get an answer when you knock on a lady's door."

"I was," he replied, trying to ignore the peeling wall paper with its blotches of maroon and yellow. "But I was afraid it wouldn't come, and I wanted to see you."

Becky hitched up her dress and got off the bed. "Well," she returned, planting small fists squarely on her hip bones, "here I am. You see me. What do you want?"

"Tea," answered Estabrook. "Shall we have it together?"

"I have some liver sausage and a roll, and maybe the lady that lives next door could furnish a pickle. Swell, huh?"

Estabrook flung up his hands.

"Stop talking that way, do Becky. I know I was rotten this morning, but I want to be forgiven, even if I did behave badly."

"Just true to type. Nothing out of the way in that. Boris showed me what a fool I am, and I guess I can take my cue as well as the next one. I guess anyway I should have known from the first that I was shooting over my head when I fell for a—for you."

She took a cigarette out of a paper package, lighted a match on the sole of her shoe, and, with the cigarette in the corner of her mouth, went on ironically:

"All the same, it teaches me a lesson. I've been sorta up stage myself about some folks. Boys that couldn't keep straight, people that got drunk, and all that. I've had the idea that if I kept clean and decent I was as good as anybody. After all we're all born equal, aren't we? Well, I'm beginning to see light now. Twice in twenty-four hours I've been tipped off as to how you nice men feel about a girl like me, and once the tip came from a gentleman, and once it came from—well—never mind about that."

Becky took the cigarette out of her mouth, regarded the burning tip solemnly, replaced it again and spoke through a cloud of smoke.

"You know right enough I fell for you last night, Johnny," she said. "The minute I saw you I did, and, in a sort of way, I had already signed up long before I even spoke to you. Well, I understand now how silly of me it was. I understand what I must seem to you, just a little no account kid. All the same," she concluded in a stronger voice, "just because my name's not in the social register or anything like that, you can't come around here with your superior airs. You gotta keep away, see?"

"Is that all?" Estabrook enquired.

Becky stared at him. "It oughta be enough to hold you."

"Becky . . ."

"Go away," she said, thickly.

Estabrook took a step forward and suddenly, to his own utter astonishment, found himself on his knees beside her.

"Becky," he whispered, "Becky, forgive . . ."

Her answering voice was roughly discordant.

"Get up . . ." she cried, "Get up . . . don't do that. Don't you know that's my place, not yours? Oh Johnny . . . Johnny . . ."

She was on the floor beside him, her arms about his neck, his lips against the faded crepe of her blouse.

So January passed, blue, cold, crystal clear.

Yet concealed, smothered like unwanted fires, those fears burned in deeply, unconsciously—those fears that were so human, so unfair, so natural and so terribly devastating.

For Becky never quite rid herself of the terror Scarlett and her past life had inspired: the terror that Estabrook looked down upon her. More than anything she wanted his honor, his respect, and for all her virtue these two could only be gauged by the offer of his hand in marriage. So, as the weeks rolled past and the final word remained unspoken, doubt began to dig a grave for Becky's happiness, although her lips still smiled bravely for Estabrook.

His friend Hildebrand, who had been the admirer of Miss Durfee—star of the revue in which Becky appeared—confessed to Estabrook that he had only succeeded in recovering his letters to the actress by the payment of a large sum of money. Blackmail—or unbearable scandal. And Hildebrand, all but weeping as he told his story, put the cause of all his trouble to the scheming chorus girl instead of himself. He ended up with a caution to Estabrook to keep away from them.

Meanwhile Becky still played in the successful revue, and was even given a number of her own, an eccentric dance and a rather more eccentric song. But for all that she remained part [illegible] six nights a week [illegible] of two afternoons she [illegible] wiggled beside the [illegible] perfumed Violet.

And Violet, regarding Becky now with pity rather than animosity, [illegible] accounts of such intimate happenings as would have greatly astonished Becky [illegible] Estabrook [illegible] Dan Scarlett [illegible] at Palm Beach, but [illegible] still retained a most [illegible] interest in all Miss McCloskey's affairs.

Woodrow Wilson's Personal Power Recognized by His College Mates

wins. All along he makes a strong impression of power upon his fellow students. One of them remembers that "he steadily grew in the estimation of his fellow members until he was recognized as the best debater in it—always with full and ready knowledge of the question and with unequaled facility in clear expression. He was especially effective in extemporaneous debate."

ORGANIZED DEBATING CLUB.

But even this training was not sufficient. He wanted more debating and moreover, since he had become profoundly interested in the British parliamentary system, he wanted to make a laboratory test of it. We find him, therefore, organizing a Liberal Debating Club among a group of his classmates.

The constitution, written out, indeed entirely composed by young Wilson himself, is still in existence. "This society shall be known as the Liberal Debating Club and shall be founded upon the fundamental principles of Justice, Morality and Friendship. . . .

"The members of this club shall form a brotherhood and shall be expected to assist and encourage each other in every possible way." The officers were: Charles Talcott of New York, president, and Thomas W. Wilson of North Carolina, Secretary of State. The Secretary of State was Prime Minister, with far more powers and responsibilities than the president. Bills were to be presented and debated and the Secretary of State and his "government" could be "sustained" or "turned out" exactly as in the British Parliament.

The club had a vigorous life and even collected quite a library, including, somewhat paradoxically, Shakespeare's plays, which were sometimes read aloud and discussed.

It was not only as an orator and debater that he sought to prepare himself, the speaker must also "know the world of men and affairs." We find him, therefore, following ardently the political events in his own country and in Europe.

He read persistently the best newspapers and the most thoughtful magazines—"The New York Evening Post," "The Nation" and the best English journals. His essays of the time have often a topical reference that shows how fresh and clear his knowledge was of "the world of men and affairs."

His interest is never merely in the news, nor yet in the personalities of the leaders, though leadership was one of his supreme concerns, but in trying to hammer out the metal of these men and their powers in terms of statesmanship and in the development of government. We [illegible] years of twenty [illegible] a [illegible] of the statesman:

"Men of [illegible] conviction [illegible] and themselves the spirit of their country's [illegible]. And [illegible] statesmen [illegible] toward the realization of [illegible] which [illegible] the unreserved devotion of [illegible] to the service of the State and to the solution of all the most [illegible] problems of [illegible] policy."

He must also know the backgrounds of political life and the origins of political [illegible]. In October, 1877, in his junior year, he discovers Green's "Short History of the English People" and devours it with delight.

He writes in "The Princetonian" of its [illegible] charm and recommends it eagerly to all of his friends. [illegible] annotated.

What he got out of it was an idea that [illegible] throughout his career [illegible] American history was only [illegible] ment of English [illegible] of the great [illegible] cratic government.

All this added power [illegible] interest in the [illegible] in the great tradition of [illegible] race. [illegible] was on the subject "Our Kinship with England."

Another notable result [illegible] upon these studies. He formed the grand idea of writing some time a similar history of the American people, which later he was to [illegible]. He was fired with an intense desire to begin at once and took [illegible] about the Princeton countryside, which is unusually rich in historical associations connected with the Revolutionary War campaigns of George Washington.

Passages in his "Life of George Washington" and other writings read as though [illegible] from personal contact with the very localities.

So the young man "came to himself," "took his education into his own hands." As he said of Bismarck, "the singleness of his aim . . . concentrated his powers" and he felt with Pitt "the concentrating power of strong [illegible]." He went through his courses credit[illegible] but he sought no [illegible] Shakespeare and [illegible] he could win [illegible] his own [illegible] would not [illegible] he won both [illegible] seeking [illegible] the Whig Society, managing editor of "The P[illegible]" he won one of the [illegible] and the [illegible] essay [illegible] though he was not an athlete he was chosen president of the baseball association. He was the kind of man who [illegible] for [illegible]

COLLEGE FRIENDSHIPS.

[illegible] devotion to his own [illegible] interests did not [illegible] him [illegible] generous [illegible] attracted men to him [illegible] he could talk [illegible] or Scotch or Irish [illegible]. And he was [illegible] or less able [illegible]

[illegible] Hiram Woods and others.

[illegible] "He was my warm friend for [illegible] years."

Early in his course Wilson moved to a room in the [illegible] Witherspoon Hall and [illegible] went to board with [illegible] of men who called [illegible] "The Alligators." His room was on the second story at the [illegible]—No. 7.

It had a sizable study and a closet of a bedroom [illegible] looked out upon the [illegible] street of Princeton [illegible].

Young Wilson [illegible] central figure in [illegible] the Witherspoon [illegible] together often in [illegible] on the room of [illegible] there were [illegible] every subject [illegible] afterward Woodrow Wilson [illegible] such gatherings.

[illegible] university [illegible] 6 and 9 o'clock [illegible] when the professor [illegible] and minds meet [illegible]

[illegible] of us, but we [illegible] what he called [illegible] is the play of the [illegible]. He took great [illegible] pain out in his con[illegible]. There [illegible] his eye [illegible] know that he had [illegible] ral for him as an undergrad[illegible] Burke, Brougham [illegible] for the [illegible] of Mayne Reid.

"This country [illegible] which [illegible] strong [illegible] all [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] often [illegible] Pitt & Co."

Letters to Wilson's college friends, with many of whom he kept up a steady correspondence through his life, will be the subject of tomorrow's chapter; also the aspirations which he had even in his early Princeton days, to enter political affairs.

Face Peeler Reveals Youthful Beauty

To free your skin of freckles, tan, sunburn and other summer ailments it is always best to completely peel off the entire surface. This is quickly accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which can be had at any drug store. Use at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending skin begins to peel off in fine powder-like particles. Soon the entire outer layer is absorbed without harm or inconvenience. The underneath skin presents a spotless clearness, obtainable in no other way. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use this face lotion: 1 ounce powdered saxolite and a half-pint witch hazel.

A New Plan for Telephone Bills

A new plan for billing telephone service will be put in practice NEXT MONTH in Metropolitan Boston. Briefly, it is this:

Instead of sending out all bills at the end of each month, we're planning to send them out in six batches. Instead of dating them all the last day of the month, we shall date some of them the 5th, some the 10th, some the 15th, and others the 20th, 25th, and 30th—or whatever the last day of the month is.

Bills will be mailed within a few days of the date they bear. The schedule:

5th	Blackstone Bowdoin Brighton Capitol	Cohasset Everett Haymarket Hingham	Hull Ocean Porter Revere	Richmond Roxbury Stadium Weymouth
10th	Aspinwall Charlestown	Crystal Granite	Hancock Jamaica	Melrose Prospect
15th	Arlington Back Bay Columbia Copley	Geneva Lexington Lincoln Parkway	Reading Stoneham Wellesley	West Newton Winchester Woburn
20th	Braintree Canton Center Newton	Chelsea Congress East Boston	Highlands Hubbard Hyde Park	Randolph University
25th	Liberty Malden	Milton Regent	Somerset	South Boston
31st	Belmont Dedham Kenmore	Mystic Needham	Newton North Norwood	Talbot Waltham

How the new plan will work in your case is explained carefully in "Between Ourselves," our monthly talk with subscribers. You will find it enclosed with the September 30 bills—last under the old plan—now in the mails. In the interest of good mutual understanding, we ask you to read this folder, and to note especially the way the various items of your telephone service, both charges and credits, are brought up to the new billing date.

Salient Points of the Bidding

East's bidding of his two-suited hand and West's showing of his preference for the Major suit bid, followed along conventional lines. South's original pass and subsequent bid and rebid of the Hearst suit showed length in the suit without tops. In spite of North's assist after the rebid, South's hand does not warrant a bid to five Hearts. North, however, has exceptional support for his partner's evident holding properly gives a second assist.

Trick 5. With reasonable expectation of success, Declarer plays for a Small Slam, leading the Jack of Diamonds. East is positively marked with five Spades and inferentially, from the bidding, with five Clubs; and having followed twice in Hearts he can have but a singleton Diamond. With five Diamonds unaccounted for, the chance of East's singleton being the Queen is remote as must be apparent even to those unfamiliar with the "Theory of Probabilities." Declarer therefore plays West for the Queen and finesses the Jack. Should, by chance, East hold the Queen, game cannot be endangered, although a small Slam will not be made. In that case, Declarer should guard against the extremely remote possibility of East's also holding the ten, by refusing a needless finesse on the second round.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

HARMONY IN BUYING FOR HOME BETTERMENT

By J. J. MUNDY.

WHEN your efforts at home improvement are to impress a chance or a special guest, very likely they are superficial.

Perhaps you buy a lot of things that do not fit into the scheme of of your home decoration.

Possibly you see an odd chair or a quaint lamp or a table cover or some other article that strikes your fancy and you get it, only to realize when you get it home that it spoils the effect of everything else.

Colors clash, styles are mixed, cool colors in the cool room and warm tones in the sunniest room in the house, all these are thoughtless mistakes.

But the company is coming, and with the best of intentions you will the spaces with things you find swearing at one another.

Fewer things, perhaps more expensive, but each purchased for lasting value or beauty, would prove less extravagant in the end.

In your haste you are spending foolishly—not well.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

TOMORROW is October 1, and thousands of families all over the country will be changing landlords.

TENANTS will be taking new janitors for better or for worse.

ONE woman says she hates to go into another building, but she doesn't want the neighbors to think that she can't afford to move.

SHE likes her present apartment because all the rooms have whistling tubes. A whistling tube is a Scotch telephone.

A MAN can call you up and reverse his breath.

IT lets you know things that even your best friend wouldn't tell you.

THE flat is strictly up to date and has hot and cold neighbors.

IT used to have a southern exposure until the people across the street started pulling their shades down.

THEY may be a nice family, but they do all their fighting in German.

THEY could at least be friendly and quarrel in English.

IT'S terrible when you have to hire an interpreter to mind somebody else's business.

A NEW YORK woman says she's going to rent a house in the country where she can have a radio. She's tired of getting her entertainment over the dumb waiter.

THEY have to move to a bigger place anyway, her husband is growing a goiter.

HER two daughters are also going in for necking on a large scale.

SHE was afraid she'd be lonesome, but her husband promised her a party line.

SHE'LL probably have two phones. One for talking and one for listening.

IT only costs $1.50 a month to subscribe to the neighbors' secrets.

IT'S nice to live in the city and pick up a little scandal now and then, but the average woman would rather move to the country where she can start her own gossip.

History and the Child

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

TOM MAXWELL says he hates History; and you really can't blame the boy when you realize just what history means to him. In the first place he has a big thick textbook that is crammed full of historical facts and illustrated with the heads of great men. There are words on every page that half the grown-ups in the world can't pronounce, and the reading is as dry as dust.

His teacher stands up in front of the class with the book in her hand and says: "Give the date of the Battle of Shiloh," or "Name the principal events of Jefferson's administration" or "What was the Monroe Doctrine?"

And that is what "History" means to Tom Maxwell.

Warren Blakey, who lives in the same neighborhood, says he likes History better than any subject. He has to use the same text-book that Tom uses because that is the one prescribed in the course of study. But his teacher tells so many true stories connected with the facts in their history book that her pupils regard the history period as one of entertainment.

Besides that, she selects the important events in each chapter, and writes on the board questions that will emphasize these happenings. The pupils copy the questions in their note books and every now and then they have contests or written reviews based solely upon this list of questions.

But the principal reason that Warren likes History is on account of the wonderful books that repose on a book shelf in his home. There are stories of boy heroes. There are dramatic tales of great events in simple, forceful language that tell the story of the country's history in a way that reads like romance and adventure. And there is the scrap book of his mother's making that contains pictures that she has cut from magazines and newspapers. These illustrations portray historical happenings; costumes of different people; the earlier models of the steamboat, railroad trains and various other inventions that now play a large part in every-day existence.

It is most important to give your child a knowledge of his background. No man or woman is regarded as educated who lacks a knowledge of the world's history. Your child's interest in the subject depends largely upon the encouragement that he receives at home.

Public libraries have beautiful historical volumes that will appeal to the eye and the mind of any normal child. There are delightful books of fiction that centre around some outstanding even in history. There are books of travel and biography that will please and instruct your son or daughter. If you can afford to buy books, then find out just what books to buy for your children before making purchases. If your family budget forbids expenditures for books, then lead your children to the libraries and let them enjoy the inspiring books for juveniles that have been poured into the world's literature.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

At the dinner table the other day my little girl, Muriel, was given a plate of noodle soup. Her grandmother, noticing that she was eating nothing but the soup, leaving the noodles, asked her why she did not eat the noodles, too. Unconcernedly, Muriel answered, "I can't catch 'em."

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND.

"MARRIAGE is a failure," says the Modernist.

Marriage as a social institution, is losing out, he declares.

In the union of the future the only ties that will bind will be the ties of the heart, the conscience and the spirit.

• • •

Those are the real ties.

Well—perhaps

But there is a world of weight and significance in the wedding certificate—that little piece of cream-colored parchment with the fancy gold lettering, which we sign so tremblingly, and then tuck away in the top of the cedar closet—but never quite forget!!

• • •

There is an ocean of meaning in that assurance of permanency—that "till death do us part" feeling, that "forever and forever" idea.

• • •

Of course, modern marriages don't last forever; but at least you enter them believing that they will.

What vital interest are two people going to take in making and building—and owning a home, if they know at the start that they are only "leased" to each other?

• • •

What joy will a man have in giving up good cigars, or a girl feel in making over her old hats in order to pay off the instalments on the furniture, if either of them can pack his grip and walk out of the house, next week, or next day, or next minute?

What comfort will a woman find in embroidering J. G. B.'s initials all over the dinner napkins and guest towels, if there is a chance that she may have to rip them out a season or so later and replace them with H. P. C.'s monogram?

• • •

Where will be the incentive to do without matinees and bonbons and opera tickets, in order to buy solid silver spoons—if there is a chance that the "marriage" may not outlast triple-plate?

• • •

Why bother to get accustomed to all a man's little pet habits, or to learn to cook a steak in his favorite way—if there is a possibility that you may have to adjust yourself to another set of idiosyncrasies and learn to make a lamb-stew a few years hence?

• • •

Why trouble to study a woman's moods and tenses, and to adjust yourself to her ways and temperament—if you are likely to be re-adjusting yourself to another set of nerves some day?

• • •

Why try to understand Milton and Spencer and Freud to please Highbrow Harold, when you may have to learn to like comic strips and the Follies, in order to please some future Lowbrow Larry?

• • •

No, no, no! After all, it is that "till-death-do-us-part" feeling which gives us the sublime courage to face all the sacrifices that living with another human being demands:

• • •

The little marriage certificate may give you that "tired feeling."

• • •

But it also gives you that "settled feeling," that helps and inspires you to "carry on."

• • •

Marriage is a failure?

Well—maybe it is.

• • •

But, now as ever, "better a glorious failure" than an indifferent success!

nursing and will bring to even the most isolated hospitals and nurses training schools new technical procedures in saving lives through proper care.

"These first two pictures lead the way for an extraordinary motion picture course in surgery and medicine," said Mr. Hays, who is honorary chairman of the board on medical motion picture films of the American College of Surgeons. Other members of the board are Drs. J. Bentley Squier, W. W. Chipman, Franklin Martin, Bowman Crowell, Malcolm MacEachern, C. H. Mayo and George W. Crile.

The committee in charge includes these Boston physicians: Dr. Henry C. Christian, Dr. Fritz B. Talbot, Dr. Nathaniel Allison, Dr. William Graves, Dr. Kenneth D. Blackfan, Dr. Harvey Cushing, Dr. William C. Quinby, Dr. Leroy M. S. Minor, Dr. Frank B. Mallory, Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, Dr. Frank L. Richardson and Dr. Roland.

The program as prepared by the American College of Surgeons includes motion pictures on anatomy, physiology, bacteriology, embryology, surgery (including special operations, fractures, cancer and operating room technique), experimental medicine, health examination, obstetrics, hygiene, sanitation, public health, neurology, approved hospital practice and nursing.

George Eastman gave facilities of his organization. An advisory committee of more than 200 specialists was selected to aid in making these motion pictures.

The board will also produce films for educating the public so that disease may be prevented. One of the most important of these will be on the subject of cancer.

ISADORA STARS IN RUSSIA

eyes of a wealthy admirer who paid the expenses of production, Isadora proceeded with her arrangements.

She engaged the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre in the Place du Chatelet, hired an orchestra and issued announcements of the forthcoming series of dances. The slim audience of the opening night grew slimmer and slimmer as the brief season progressed.

Isadora knew nothing of the managerial scheme of packing houses with an invited public so as to create an impression of popular success.

Her only audience comprised the few who bought tickets and the few friends whom she invited. The orchestra was quick to sense disaster and demanded payment on the nail. The men deliberately played sour notes, and mysterious individuals in the audience commenced to boo and make cat-calls. The ballet was at work trying to wreck the American invader's season.

Isadora Duncan's first great popular successes in Paris, after apparent failure, will be told in tomorrow's instalment of Fred Toye's story of the dancer's life.

EXTRA SPECIAL UNREDEEMED
FUR SALE
AT NORTHERN LOAN CO.
$25, $35, $45 UP

We challenge anyone to give you greater values than we are offering. Don't let the price mislead you if it's only $25 it's the same kind you will pay $100 or more for elsewhere; do not fail to see the finest list of fashionable fur coats ever offered at a fraction of their original price; hundreds of these high grade fur coats have been pawned by furriers and the public during the dull times of the year and have not been redeemed, so the law compels us to advertise them and sell them to the public regardless of cost. This sale saves you the jobber's and middleman's profits. Come in and look them over. No obligation.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON SEPTEMBER 30, 1927

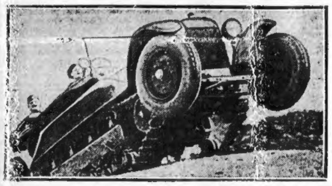
THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON:
1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land, in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND:
1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

The New War Horse

A Horse With Eight Gaits



BRITAIN'S COMBINATION MOTOR-CATERPILLAR MACHINE

The next war will be a NEW war, different from all that men have known. It will be fought and won IN THE AIR. The battleships that roam the sea and have dominion over the earth will be hidden away useless. Submarines will strike at commerce and make it practically impossible.

And all the heavens will be thick with flying machines, great "bombers" dropping high explosives and poison gas, while rapid pursuit planes, going five miles a minute and faster, attack each other and the bombing planes.

What fighting is done on land will be of a new kind. In this picture you see the new "war horse" built in Britain to take the place of the old-fashioned war horse, carrying one man and a sabre, that used to gallop over troops.

This combination caterpillar tractor and automobile was recently demonstrated by the British War Office at Aldershot, and distinguished visitors from the British colonies were taken to ride in it. It opened their eyes.

Others like it are now being constructed to carry machine guns and light cannon. The remarkable thing about it is that on smooth ground it is used as a high-speed automobile, the tractor wheels can be made to leave the road, and in thirty seconds it can be changed to run as a caterpillar tractor over very rough ground, as you see here, through swamps, across ditches.

Imagine modern artillery or cavalry trying to stop a long line of these machines, those on the smooth ground going sixty miles an hour, their machine guns spitting, those on the rough ground going more slowly on caterpillar tracks, relentlessly ploughing down opposition.

The next war will be a new war and a terrible war. Europe knows it and is preparing for it.

Here we are saving up money, intent on paying off bonds, more interested in prosperity than in the dangers that menace prosperity.

An individual like Lindbergh can fly across the ocean entirely alone. Others will one day fly in this direction; and not on a peaceful errand.

If you happen to know the names of your Congressman and your two Senators—many Americans don't—you might write those three gentlemen to think about the importance of flying machines.

Learn From Dannie

Once He Had Money. He Died Alone

Years ago in Tammany Hall, New York, the "big three" were Murphy, Haffen and McMahon. McMahon left to his promising boy, Dannie, more than $250,000, and had educated him well at LaSalle University and the Manhattan Law School.

McMahon of the big three felt, undoubtedly, as he closed his eyes that he had "done everything for his boy." He had given him an education, and had left him a quarter of a million to make him happy.

The other day, the son Dannie McMahon, only thirty-six years old, died alone in Bellevue Hospital, a pauper.

Education had not saved him, and his dollars, $250,000, were gone.

He had many "friends," as any young man spending his father's money will have "friends."

He was "the bright light of Broadway," described by his friends as "Always first to lend to a friend in need, first to pay the check when it came."

He paid his last check, poor fellow, at Bellevue Hospital, and none of the friends that helped him spend his fortune was there.

Alcoholism and bromide, one driving the heart, the other depressing it, were given by the doctors as the cause of death.

Poor Dannie McMahon rests now.

The son of McMahon, of the "Big Three," has gone to join his father.

If he could come back he would say to others, "There is no happiness in mere spending. Your friends are thick around you while you have the money, and you can die like a dog, ALONE, as I did, when your money is gone."

Young men and old, remember that the "good fellow" of today is the poor, "friendless fellow" of a little while hence.

Remember that alcohol and bright lights are not the stuff of which a happy life can be made.

Save, appreciate what you have, be generous and just with those that have a claim upon you.

But don't play the "good fellow" part. Dannie McMahon's career and early death are a warning against that.

THE NET CONDITION OF AVERAGE MAN

By DR. FRANK CRANE

UNDERNEATH all this wordy warfare between the wets and the drys and between the noble and free-born souls that enjoy the privilege of getting drunk whenever they please, and the fanatics who want to interfere with other people's liberty, lies the question, what, after all, is the net condition of the common man?

For we are not so much interested in crime among the rich and fashionable, nor with the case of the down-and-outers as we are concerned with the condition of the ordinary, average man.

Perhaps it is true, as asserted, by the wets, that more liquor is drunk under prohibition than ever before, more gilded youths are carrying gin in their hip pockets, and a more murderous brand of booze is being consumed.

But the fact remains that the average man who has to work for his living and gets a modest stipend therefor, does not drink liquor simply because he cannot afford it. Much more liquor may be drunk now, but the working man does not care to pay fifty cents or one dollar for a drink.

A recent survey made by Professor Herman Feldman, of Dartmouth College, establishes the fact that since the advent of prohibition there has been an amazing increase in the productivity of the wage earner, embracing almost every industry in the country. For instance, the output of the rubber tire worker was 139 per cent. greater in 1925 than in 1919, and this is a typical instance, not the exceptional one.

Labor bodies opposed the passage of the prohibition amendment, but the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics calls attention to the almost unbelievable increase in the productivity of the worker during the past few years.

As a matter of fact, the much-cursed prohibition amendment has placed the United States industrially in the forefront of the world. It may have been an unwarrantable interference with our personal liberty, but the effect of it has been to increase our personal efficiency, and the effort of most men is in the direction of increasing their efficiency by learning how to restrict their liberties.

Some people may think that being the most industrially effective nation in the world does not mean much, but most of us think that it does and are willing to pay the price.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

THERE are banners that wave and lift down the ranks of the growing corn, where the Summer breezes drift and a whisper of song is born; verdant banners that proudly fly while the sun's golden rays beat down as the Summer passes by, like a queen in her flower-decked gown. And the whisper of song they send adrift on the Summer breeze—does it tell of blue skies that bend over meadows and hills and trees? Does it hint of the Winter days when the harvests shall all be stored? Ah, no; from the fields of maize a rarer song has soared! From each banner that lifts comes a message of hope and trust, of the earth and its bounteous gifts, of the grain that shall grow from the dust!

THE riding of horses is coming back as an art. Not that horses will ever compete with flivvers again while under each hood is at least twenty horse power. But the people with a few hours per week who like this form of sport are spending more on it.

There are those working people who make a Sunday ride through the bridle paths of Boston for their weekly jaunt. They hire a horse for a couple of hours and try to stay on that long.

Then there are the professional and more fortunate people who can afford the luxury of owning an animal. These people may have one horse and board him out or they may maintain a stable of their own.

• • •

Riding instructors have pleasant students to teach. Arthur J. Henry told us he sometimes starts teaching boys and girls at the age of five or six years. Children have great confidence in horses. They are not afraid of catching cold, or falling off, or running out of hay, or any other overcautions that the elder people think of.

They learn quickly. James M. Curley, Jr., John Cunningham and Dorothy Stone are often seen with the older folks.

It is not necessary to be six or sixteen or even sixty to ride. Men who are in the late seventies daily show the horses who's boss.

• • •

Dr. P. J. Cronon is only one of the many well known public officials interested in riding. His horses are all from the State of Missouri but they seem perfectly gentle here in the centre of culture and art. They are well treated both by the attendants and the Simmons, Notre Dame, and private school girls who ride.

• • •

Every day on some of the thirty-four miles of Boston bridle paths may be seen some of the leaders in the various fields of art, politics, business, finance, shipping, motoring, music and society.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WILL we meet after death? How cruelly that question tears at our hearts as we see our dear ones vanish behind the veil and we take up the long, bitter, waiting. Is there no answer? "Hopeful" begs for one.

Dear Elsie—

I have just finished reading your "Listen World" in which you compare our spirits to "shooting stars." I agree with you. I, too, feel that we shall go on after we leave the body.

But won't you finish your article with another one? Won't you please say that you believe that somehow we must meet in some after-life?

There is a certain one who reads your editorials, and is in great need of help. You could do so much for this person who believes, probably with many others, that we may be "shooting stars," but that we are also merely "ships that pass in the night." Hopeful.

Will we meet our loved ones again?

I think that depends on what you call love, my dear. Much love is no better than a richly flavored meal. It is of the body and it serves the hunger of the body. Or it is merely a possession. Something to audit as one audits the figures in one's bankbook. I can't think that eternity is to be occupied with perpetuating meals or checking up possessions.

But if love has once come in all its full wonder and agony—in all its power and beauty and mystery—I cannot think that it has come to serve the small necessities of our little day or that it will flicker and go out when that day is done.

Such love is not of the body. It is not a mere chemical reaction. It floods into our poor lives in a flaming glory—and I do not think that glory ever dies.

And there must be a great purpose in its coming. All other things work according to purpose and plan. The digestion of a louse and the course of a plant are ruled alike by inexorable law. A spawning salmon is drawn through the dark tides of the Seven Seas, safe to its goal. Shall Love alone, that greatest force, have no significance, no place within the Plan, no goal beyond our short, sad struggle in the flesh? I cannot think so.

So I truly believe that the love between a particular man and a particular woman, a mother and her child, will carry on its purpose when the bodies which once house it have crumbled into dust.

I THINK WE SHALL MEET AGAIN
Elsie Robinson

Nor does such a meeting seem any more mysterious or difficult to me than our meeting here. If one grants that Love is spirit—and for me there can be no other explanation of Love—it should be as easy for love to exist OUTSIDE a body as INSIDE one. If the spirit can survive the smothering of the flesh why should it not survive the loosening of the flesh? If we can find each other here through all the murk and confusion of earthly experience, why should we doubt that we shall find each other there?
